

S.F. Airport Subway Plans Win Official Support

By FRANK LaPIERRE

The San Francisco Airports Commission demonstrated their desire Thursday to bring rapid transit to the San Francisco Airport and into San Mateo County by voting unanimously to modify terminal plans to provide for a subway station.

Cost of the immediate modifications could run as high as $3 million, with another estimated $3 million needed later to tunnel under the existing south terminal building.

With the exception of one Sunset District housewife, no one openly spoke against the expenditures proposed by Director of Airports James Carr and his aides.

No less than ten separate agencies from San Mateo and San Francisco counties voiced support for the issue.

These included representatives from major airline companies using the airport, Bay Area Rapid Transit District director William Reedy, San Francisco supervisor William Maillard, Charles Gregg, vice president of the San Mateo County Development Association and San Mateo County supervisor James V. Fitzgerald.

Fitzgerald, in a letter to the commission, said the airport is vital to the economic well-being of San Mateo County and he urged that the modifications be approved.

The passage came after more than two and a half hours of briefings and discussion of the plans for extending BART from Daly City southward down the Peninsula.

Bill Lathrop, consultant on the San Francisco Airport Access Project, hesitated to discuss progress of rapid transit south of the airport — noting that a study is now under way by San Mateo County on that phase of the system.

Lathrop traced the potential route of BART from Daly City, pointing out the highlights of the proposal such as those stations and sections of right-of-way that will be underground.

Although present plans are "flexible," Lathrop said studies indicated the subway approach into the main terminal building from the Tanforan station in San Bruno and out again to the Millbrae station was the most desirable route.

South of Millbrae station the track surfaces near Trousdale Avenue where planners have indicated a maintenance yard and turn-around point will be located.

The airport terminal station will be 700-feet long and will be below the basement area of the parking garage, according to Lathrop.

If the commission had elected to wait for San Mateo County to act first and allowed construction of the terminal to continue costs would have soared, it was explained.

Asked how much these costs might be after construction was completed, Larry Dahms, BART's assistant general manager, said "perhaps as high as $10 million."

Dahms called the commissions' vote crucial to the economic growth of San Francisco Airport.

He explained that within the next 20 years the airport would reach, and possibly surpass, anticipated capacity without rapid transit.

To rely solely on present ground access to SFI — routes 280, 380 and the Bayshore Freeway — might cause the gradual demise of the airport.

Passenger traffic could well be lost to other airports, specifically Oakland, Tom Bertken said.

Bertken is deputy director of airports for San Francisco and shares Carr's enthusiasm for rapid transit into the airport.

Together they explained to commissioners William E.

McDonnell, John A. Sutro, Wallace Lynn and William K. Coblentz that the airport's maximum capacity will not be dictated by air traffic, but by ground access.

From 4.5 million air passengers only a dozen years ago more than 14.5 million people will fly this year.

And this figure will swell to more than 30 million with rapid transit within the next two decades, it was pointed out.

The airport is now spending some $200 million on its expansion program.

Without transit directly into the airport facility it might be unwisely spent, commissioners were told.

"There are no other reasonable options," Dahms replied after being asked by Commissioner Sutro what the results of not having BART into SFI would be?

It had been earlier explained that rapid transit systems elsewhere in the nation that did not have direct service to airports lost considerable patronage. Systems that came within a few hundred feet of passenger facilities showed dramatic usage such as Boston where patrons can detrain and walk less than 200 feet to airport loading ramps.

Supervisor Fitzgerald, while not committing his county to any action on the system, urged passage of the resolution which would pave the way for construction of the subway.

Families Tend Graves of Dead

Sunday was a bright sunny day in Colma and dozens of persons armed with watering cans and scissors were busily scampers about on hands and knees caring for their loved ones' final resting places.

Their efforts appeared to be futile.

Around them was parched grass and withering flowers stuck in dry pots.

At one cemetery many of the graveside faucets were turned off.

The bereaved brought their own water in cans and plastic bottles.

Fresh flowers adorned the grave sites when they left, the dried up plants having been discarded in already overflowing trash containers.

Over-all, the once-lush cemeteries with their picket-sign carrying sentries on duty at main entrances resemble "boothills" of olden days.

Weeds flourish and cover two-foot-high monuments.

Sand and leaves cover name markers implanted at ground level, making it all but impossible to discern whose remains now rest six feet below.

At first glance those individuals attending graves seem to go about their tasks with an outward air of indifference to the strike which began last June 3.

But as the title of a hit song of yesteryear observed, many are "Laughing on the Outside, Crying on the Inside."

More than crying, most are downright angry.

Angry at what they consider to be "disrespect" for the dead. Angry at seeing a place considered by them to be "sacred," gradually turned into a dumpsite.

Oddly, very few persons blame the strikers.

Rather than point the finger of blame at any one person or group, the mourners, for the most part, prefer to avoid the subject completely.

They wish the strike would end and that things would return to normal at the 11 cemeteries being struck by the Cemetery Workers Union Local 265.

But there is no name-calling or angry denunciations of either side in the dispute.

One woman, accompanied by her young son, interrupted her grass snipping to suggest that she felt sorrow for those whose loved ones had passed on since the strike started.

She asked not to be identified. "Those poor people will have to mourn twice. They cried when their husband or wife died and also at the funeral. And they will again suffer the loss when this strike ends and the graveside service is held," she said.

There are about 1200 bodies awaiting burial at various mortuaries in San Francisco and the Peninsula. Several mortuaries have joined together to rent warehouse space for storage in an undisclosed location The Times learned.

Cemetery workers are asking for a minimum $6 daily wage increase over their present $34.20, according to Maurice Fitzgerald, secretary-treasurer of the CWU Local 265.

Last reports from George Johns, secretary of the San Francisco Labor Council, said both sides in the dispute are "further apart than ever."

Strong Support for Senior Plan

Strong support was given for the proposed senior citizen low-income housing, 169 First Avenue, Daly City, at a meeting held last week in the Memorial Community Center.

The meeting was co-chaired by Mrs. Virgel Davis of the Daly City Senior Citizens Club and the Reverend James McCluskey of the Grace Presbyterian Church.

Organizations represented were Daly City Information and Referral Center, NAACP, Action Awareness, League of Women Voters of North San Mateo County, Board of Management of the YWCA and the Westlake and the Daly City Senior Citizens Clubs.

The Mission Merchants' Association gave their endorsement of the project at their last meeting.

To date the two senior citizen groups have collected more than 200 signatures of persons approving such housing. Many of these people live or have businesses in the vicinity of First Avenue, Market and Mission Streets. No organization has voiced opposition to this housing project.

The City's Planning Commission gave its approval also. It is scheduled for discussion by the City Council at the study session Monday evening.

There will be a second meeting of interested organizations for planning and evaluation this Thursday, 7:30 p.m., at the War Memorial Community Center.

Individuals and organizations who favor this senior citizens' residence are urged to write the City Council and to be present at the City Council study session Monday night. Further information may be obtained by calling Mrs. Davis, 548-8076, Reverend McCluskey, 359-0260 or 586-5681, or Nick Pesunoff of Action Awareness at 992-1366.

S.S.F. School District Tax Rate Lowered

The tax rate for South San Francisco's Unified School District Monday was lowered by 20 cents per $100 of assessed valuation.

Trustees adopted the $14.8 million with a mild protest from members of the Certificated Employee Council.

Instead of dropping the tax rate from $5 to $4.80, they wanted to use the money to improve the quality of education, by reinstating programs such as smaller class sizes, reinstating reading programs that were scratched earlier.

One resident, Mrs. Betty Higgins, said she didn't mind the tax reduction, but she wanted to be certain this doesn't mean a tax increase next year.

"Are we going to cut the tax rate and then turn around and start scaring everybody again next year? Or will we have some peace in this district?" she asked.

Superintendent Paul Nielsen said he could not guarantee peace. He said, however, that by reducing the tax rate the trustees will have some options to work with.

This was interpreted to mean that should the necessity arise, the trustees would be able to raise the tax rate to the $5 level without too great a burden.

Nielsen said that the district admittedly was in a bind the past few years.

Spokesman for the Certificated Employee Council was Barbara Olds. She told the board members her organization was of the impression that should additional monies come to the district the teachers would be in on spending priorities.

Board Chairwoman Lorraine Cooper said all monetary items were finished between the board and the council as of May 3.

"I don't understand why teachers can't be involved in policy making priorities for programs," said Mrs. Olds. She referred to $250,000 the district received as a result of reassessments. "We figured (using this money) some items (cut previously) would be reinstated."

Mrs. Cooper again emphasized that no previously cut programs would be reinstated. The board felt taxpayers were being burdened enough and that the money would be used to lower the tax rate.

"It's a pleasure giving consideration to the people now out of work," said Trustee Leo Eserini, adding that to his knowledge this was the second time in 19 years that the school district has had a tax cut.

Certificated Employee Council members also lost out on a fringe benefit fight that reduced a $47 a month proposal to $36.

Pacifica Council Delays Coast Vote

Pacifica's City Council considered pending coastal legislation Monday night, but took no action as to its merits.

The board heard a recommendation from City Manager Jim Swayne that the council endorse Senate Bill 1483.

The bill would set up a Coastal Conservation and Development Commission to regulate future shoreline development and its effect on the environment. The Commission would be composed of local and governor-appointed members.

"It appears that the bill is closest to being acceptable to local government," Swayne said in recommending it.

Discussion, however, was limited to a few minutes as Mayor

Grace McCarthy noted the advancing hour and said that the council "could spend a couple hours on this issue."

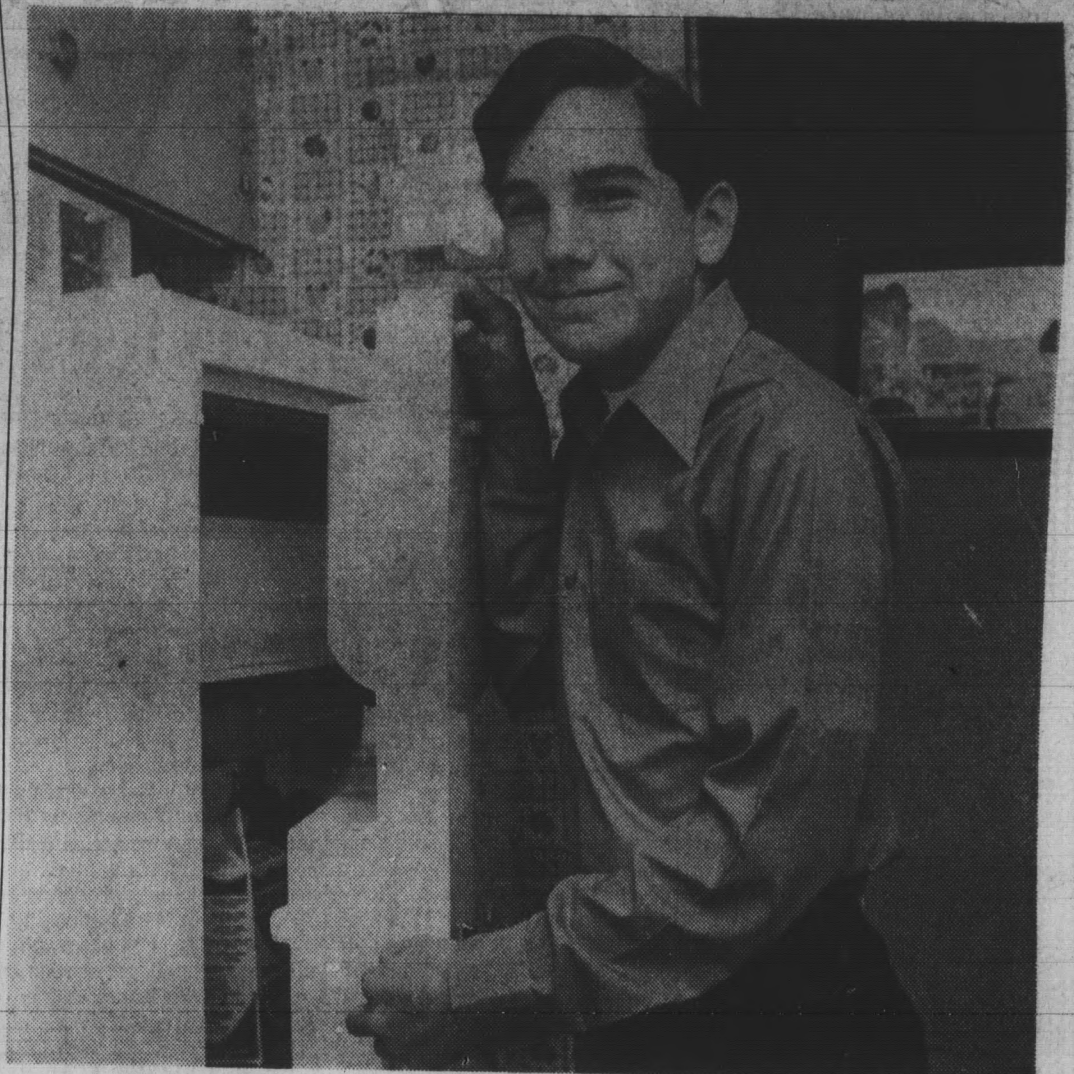

The council decided that it might be wiser to take a stand at a later date.

"I hope they don't pass something before we take a stand," Councilman Stan Farber quipped.

A dwindling audience of perhaps 20 people, down from an evening's high of about 50, heard his remark.

Prior to the coastal development issue, the council had considered more than a dozen other agenda items which included a report from the Pacifica Youth Service Bureau and a proposed

Hearing Set on Manor Dr. Parking

Pacifica residents in the neighborhood of Manor Drive, between Cragmont Court and Fremont, will be heard in public hearing Tuesday on the matter of parking restriction on Manor Drive.

The Pacifica Health and Safety Commission will hold the hearing at Terra Nova High School cafeteria starting at 8 p.m.

The matter was initiated by the Manor Village Improvement Club in May. President Charles Rodriguez pointed out the traffic hazards of the crowded, narrow and steep grade in the area.

His suggestion that parking be banned on Manor Drive was approved by the Commission in May. The recommendation was confirmed by the police department. It went to the city council, which asked that a public hearing be held.

Scout Revives Boy Saved From Icebox

A 12-year-old South San Francisco Boy Scout was credited with saving the life of a four-year-old boy who had stopped breathing after being trapped in an abandoned refrigerator for more than an hour Sunday.

He administered mouth-to-mouth resuscitation to Barry Green, of 335 Arbor Drive, after rescuing Barry and Troy Lind, also 4, of 338 Arbor Drive, from the refrigerator.

While Gerald applied his first aid knowledge to the Green boy, Mrs. Elda R. Jekot, a neighbor, administered back pressure respiration to Troy, whose pulse had slowed to the danger point.

The children had been playing outside. When Mrs. Lind was unable to locate them about 2:45 p.m. she began asking neighbors to help in the search.

Gerald and Mrs. Jekot happened on the discarded refrigerator in the garage of the Lind home and decided to check it. Inside the slumped bodies of the small children were discovered.

There was evidence the boys had struggled desperately to free themselves, a police department spokesman said.

Firemen arrived about five minutes after Gerald and Mrs. Jekot began working over the young victims.

Gerald, a student at Alta Loma Junior High School, finished at the top of his lifesaving class.

This was his first opportunity to put into action what he had learned in the classroom.

Police officers Ken Metcalf and Keith Frazierley said the quick action of the two rescuers undoubtedly saved both lives.

The children were taken to Mary's Help Hospital for treatment after their rescue.

Troy was transferred to Kaiser Hospital after emergency treatment.

A hospital spokesman said Barry Green was in good condition.

New Tanforan Shopping Center Wins Approval

The chairman of the Planning Commission held up a four-foot-high dandelion bush to emphasize his objections — but the San Bruno City Council Monday night still voted its approval of a plan for a multi-million dollar expansion of Tanforan Shopping Center.

Victor Ogrey's objections were the only ones voiced at the public hearing — but his protest was a very emphatic one.

"Look at the root development on that thing," he indicated. "I'd call that a weed."

He said it was growing that afternoon in a raised planter bed by Tanforan Sears' automotive building.

"I admit I stole it!" he declared.

The expansion, as explained by Fred Nicholas, general partner in the Hapsmith Co., would develop the shopping center into a 1,100,000 square foot center, valued at over $80 million.

It included five major projects:

1. Construction of the Emporium Dept. Store, along Huntington Avenue.

2. A parking structure to hold 969 cars.

3. Enlarging the shopping mall to link with the Emporium.

4. Enlarging the shopping mall on the El Camino side.

5. Construction of a 10,000 square foot, one-level building.

He asked that the parking ratio be eased so that in the event the lease with the City of San Francisco, for its old streetcar right-of-way, is terminated, the shopping center would still be "legal." It is a 35-year lease, he said, but it can be canceled if BART needs it for a rapid transit right-of-way. Although San Francisco has actually agreed to permit BART to use it, the future of the BART extension to the Airport is still in doubt.

The right-of-way, meanwhile is being paved for parking.

Hap Smith, developer, explained that the first three projects, which are on the Huntington Avenue side, would be done first, to be followed by the last two projects, on the El Camino side.

"We can't rip up the parking lot front and back at the same time. No one would be able to get in to shop," Smith explained.

Nicholas explained that the Center is still struggling in its infancy: the Emporium will be started September 1 of this year. Penney's will be completed during the first several months of 1972, to be followed by the Emporium's completion by the end of 1972.

Smith predicted completion of the entire center by July of 1973 — barring too many strikes.

First issue brought up was the problem of double striping parking, brought up by Councilman Tony Governale, who expressed concern that Tanforan single striped its parking lots in apparent defiance of city ordinance.

"Our architect, Sears' architect both missed it in the ordinance — and the city officials who checked it missed it," Smith explained.

He added that he could see no sense in double-striping. However, when the problem seemed about to become an insurmountable issue, Smith announced that he has already ordered that all future parking be double striped, and by the time the shopping center is completed, it will all be double-striped.

He assured the council that there need be no concern over the condition of the plants at Tanforan.

"I am leaving for Italy on August 23," he declared, "to bring back the $28,000 statue of Sebastien, for the shopping center. I could have brought a statue of a horse for $5,000. Take my word... all these plants will be replaced until they are all healthy."

zoning change that sparked a citizens' protest.

The Youth Service Bureau report was made by the agency's Coordinator, Ralph Rutley, in reply to a number of questions raised by the council about the job the Bureau has been doing during its two years of existence.

"The purpose of the Pacifica Youth Service Bureau," Rutley said, to explain his agency's role: "is the diversion of youth from the juvenile justice system through the provision of counseling and other appropriate ameliorative instruments."

He acknowledged that it is difficult to measure how effective the Bureau has been, but said:

"It should be noted that there has been a general decrease of referral of youths to the probation department from the City of Pacifica, a decrease of bookings into Juvenile Hall and an overall decrease in the juvenile delinquency rate since the Bureau's establishment."

The Bureau's performance was generally commended by the council's members.

The zoning protest came on a proposal that a site fronting on Monterey Road be changed from a "neighborhood commercial" district to a "general commercial" one.

The change was apparently requested with the expectation that a motorcycle shop or similar type of business could then be set up there.

Many residents of the area, however, evidently thought that this would not be a good idea. One of them, Sheila McCarty, spoke to the council on the matter and said that she had a petition with more than 200 signatures protesting the proposed zoning change.

Report Says Runway not 'Too Short'

When Pan American's Boeing 747 crunched through a series of runway approach lights on take-off July 30, and crash landed two hours later, it was neither because the runway was too short nor because of sound abatement procedures.

So said Airports Director James K. Carr Thursday in a report to the city's Airports Commission.

Carr did not attempt to define the cause of the take-off and landing incident, saying that any attempt to do so by him would be infringing on rights and duties of the federal bodies now investigating the near-disaster.

Most of what he said was already known:

That Captain Calvin Dyer of Woodside had elected to use the 8400-foot Runway 1-Right for his take-off because the normally preferable 10,700-foot Runway 28-Left, was closed for repairs.

Carr said that apparently one of the reasons Captain Dyer chose to use 1-Right instead of the 9700-foot 28 Right, which was also available is because 1-Right extends northward into the Bay and has a "clearway" beyond the take-off point. This would indicate that Captain Dyer knew his plane was heavily loaded, and wanted to be certain of sufficient distance in which to climb away from the runway at a low level, after take-off.

Airports Manager Carr told the commissioners that Pan Am's 747 had used a "displaced threshold" 1100 feet down Runway 1-Right from Bayshore Freeway, but that this was not due to sound abatement. This is because, he said, the air blast from a 747's four huge engines, could tumble cars on the Bayshore Freeway, if take-offs were allowed any closer.

Carr said firmly that the remaining 8400 feet of the 9500-foot runway is "adequate for 747s," and that "all we do is make the facilities available. It is the responsibility of the airlines and the pilots, to decide whether they are safe to use, knowing their own conditions of loading, and wind, and other factors."

County HRC Offers Services to Cities

The services of the County Human Relations Commission are being offered to the county's 19 cities.

"Regardless of the racial and religious composition of our cities," said Executive Director James E. Forrest, "no city is immune from unfairness, bigotry or undue discrimination."

He said he hopes to expand the activities of his agency into the cities to help them prevent problems from arising.

"Historically," he explained, "we wait until something happens, and then we act. Hopefully by taking the right steps now, we can anticipate problems and prevent them from happening."

"There is no geographical area that is not or soon will be faced with some degree of social and perhaps racial economic problems," Forrest added.

He said the county commission has received many complaints from residents of cities concerning police contacts, alleged discrimination in civil service testing and hiring procedures and in housing.

"There are cities in the county in which there are systematic efforts to exclude minorities from housing," Forrest said. "Sometimes, these efforts are too subtle to be proved in a legal way but we know they exist. We have received complaints about housing discrimination from practically every city in the county."

It is in those areas — police-community relations, employment and housing — that the county group wants to concentrate at first in its work with the cities, Forrest said.

Two cities — San Mateo and San Carlos — have human relations commissions. The offer of cooperation is being extended to them as well as to the other cities, according to Forrest.

Fraud Detectives to Meet in South City

Representatives of the nearly two hundred fifty Welfare Fraud Investigators from the fifty-eight California Counties will hold a one-day conference at the Rodeway Airport Inn, 280 South Airport Boulevard, South San Francisco, this Friday.

William C. Cheek, Supervising Welfare Fraud Investigator for the Los Angeles County Department of Public Social Services, and interim president of the California Welfare Fraud Investigators Association, in announcing the statewide conference noted that "through the efforts of a small number of investigators in the State, the Counties were responsible for California leading the nation during the calendar 1970 year for total dollar reimbursement of Welfare Funds fraudulently received by recipients and for total prosecutions."

"Actually, the total value of the welfare fraud investigator program to the communities of California cannot be measured inasmuch as one of our primary objectives is to prevent fraud and assure that those individuals in need do receive the assistance that they are entitled to receive," the Association spokesman commented.

The one-day conference program includes a presentation by David Swope, District Coordinator for Stanislaus County, Senator Howard Way, who will speak on "Welfare Legislation, Present and Future; and an address by Robert Carlson, Director of the California State Department of Social Welfare.

Workshop sessions will be conducted by Robert Werner, Senior Investigator for the Fresno County Department of Public Welfare on "Back to Basics" and Dixon Davies, Chief Investigator of Sacramento County Welfare Department, on "Medi-Care - Medi-Cal - Food Stamps."

Avery C. Gillelan, Welfare Investigator for the San Bernardino County Welfare Department will officiate at the election of officers for the statewide organization, reportedly to be the first of its type in the United States.

S.S.F. Planners Accused of Credibility Gap

A couple of credibility gaps evolved at Monday's meeting of the South San Francisco planning commissioners.

Resident Tony Montoya said there is one between the commissioners and those people in his neighborhood.

Commissioner Gordon Boblitt said a lack of communication exists between the commission and various public utilities.

Montoya's complaint was that the commissioners are making decisions that critically affect the population of the city, yet they spend little, if any time in the neighborhoods.

Rezoning of a 2400-square foot single-family residential parcel to allow an apartment development is what set Montoya off.

The rezoning is at the north-east corner of Grand Avenue and Forest View Drive, currently maintained as a landscaped entrance to the Sunshine Gardens section of the city.

City Planner Dan Pass recommended against approval, and Commissioners Gordon Boblitt and Mario Raffaeli voted against it. Voting for the rezoning were Commissioners William Botteff, John Gardner and Marcel Campredon.

In March, the commissioners denied a tentative parcel map which represented the separation of a related sub parcel.

He said the credibility gap is so great that a personal survey he took indicated that of ten people, only two knew the names of any of the commissioners.

Montoya also requested that firms seeking permits from the city be required to identify the makeup of the firm. "Who are they?" asked Montoya. "That plays an important role (in the decisions)."

He also suggested that developers lay out a definite time scheduled and be required to follow it.

Commissioner Boblitt's complaint was that PG&E has numerous slivers of land throughout the city which are not maintained, which PG&E has not explained how the land would be used, if at all.

This criticism then evolved into a general criticism of all public utilities with land holdings in the city.

"Some of the worst kept parts of the city are those lands owned by public utilities," said Commissioner William Botteff. City Planner Dan Pass said the matter is before the League of California Cities, and is a problem that has been fought for a long time to no avail.

S.S.F. Rejects Integration

South San Francisco Unified School District Trustees Monday rejected a request to support the San Francisco Unified School District desegregation and integration efforts.

Board Chairwoman Lorraine Cooper said, "The San Francisco School District is so confused, I don't see how anyone can take a position — especially another school district."

She apparently was voicing the opinion of the entire board. Unanimous agreement was that Mrs. Cooper and Superintendent Paul Nielsen get together and prepare a letter to the effect the South San Francisco district is not at this time passing any resolution of support.

The request came from the State Department of Education, Bureau of Intergroup Relations. It was a letter signed by Ples A. Griffin, chief of the bureau.

In the letter, Griffin said "desegregation of all elementary schools in September of 1971 is not an event affecting only the San Francisco Unified School District. It is bound to have impact on adjacent communities and school districts."

Trustees also were asked to affirm support and participation in a proposed tri-county (Marin, San Mateo and San Francisco) regional group. The purpose of the group would be to explore the feasibility of establishing one or more integrated education programs.

No action was taken on this request either. According to Griffin's letter, a

THE MARQUEE

A star-struck kid from San Francisco's Fillmore District who once had the temerity to phone Jane Russell in Hollywood and got a spanking from his mother when the famous sex symbol called back, has come into his own.

Danny Duncan is difficult to classify other than to say he is talented. When he first came on the theatrical scene it was as an actor (a kid at that) with Martha Eliot's San Francisco Players Guild that traveled the Bay Area with children's shows.

DANNY DUNCAN
Versatile

Before that he'd done what many of us with the "acting bug" did: hang around stage doors of the Alcazar, the Curran and Geary, see every show done by the Actors' Workshop and read all the movie magazines and see the same movies over and over again.

"I don't know what I would have really said to Jane Russell except 'I love you' but I did see her in 'The French Line' seven times," the clever and self-effacing performer explained recently.

As a youngster living on Pine Street, he'd borrow his mother's hats, design costumes from sheets and used clothing and put on revues in the basement with friends from the neighborhood for parents and friends. Some of those veterans of childhood are still with him, performing as dancers in his recent "Ballet Black" at San Mateo High School or the current musical revue, "Uhuru" at the Boarding House on Bush Street.

"I got all my training from motion pictures and television. I'm able to apply my mind technically and although my mother couldn't understand then why I spent all my time in the movie houses, my uncle paid my way in because he was convinced I was seeing something in it he couldn't."

After seeing "The Ten Commandments" 55 times, he called Cecil B. DeMille, but was in too much of a state of shock to answer when the producer finally came to the line.

His musical background is a natural as breathing. He never took a lesson but hears the concept in his inner ear, hums it into a tape recorder, takes it to a musician friend who writes it down in notation and scores it for voice and instrument.

"As a child I had a passion for fitting a melody line to a mood. I know what I want to hear," he said.

He's currently working with Johnny Land of the music department at Polytechnic High School on a musical based on the life of Josephine Baker. He had seen her at the Golden Gate Theatre and hopes to visit her in Europe this fall.

His dancing technique evolved out of a natural affinity for movement. After a year of teaching dancing for the San Francisco Park and Recreation Department, he gathered together ghetto youngsters and formed a company. Some of these loyal friends he will take to Chicago and New York when "Uhuru" (Swahili for freedom) moves there.

"I want to write plays but will hold onto music as long as I can."

With nightly performances at 8:30 p.m., Danny still writes four hours a day and rehearses. For relaxation he designs and sews his own clothes.

Law Post for Brunan

San Bruno Attorney John A. Long has accepted an invitation to serve on a special American Bar Association (ABA) Committee on Youth Education for Citizenship.

Long, who graduated from USC Law School in 1970, joined his brother Ted in his San Bruno law practice after being admitted to the bar this past June.

ABA President Leon Jaworski invited Long to join the special committee. The committee's purpose is to acquaint America's students in primary and secondary schools with the legal process. It is hoped this will give them a clearer picture of how the system is structured.

Long said he wants to initiate a pilot program on the West Coast. "While the committee has an allocation of funds, additional grants will probably be necessary to make any significant progress in teaching young students why and how the law works," said Long.

JUHSD Trustees Increase Tax Rate

Trustees of the Jefferson Union High School District last week approved a nine-cent increase for the 1971-72 fiscal year.

The new tax rate was set at 1.20 per $100 of assessed valuation.

The total budget is now $11.31 million compared to last year's figure of $10.98.

In addition to the increase in the tax rate it was also noted that taxpayers in the district will experience an 8.65 per cent increase in their assessed valuation as well.

The combination of the increase in assessed valuation and the district's tax increase imposes a double burden on many property owners in the district.

The district's largest increase resulted from a state-mandated repayment figure which requires an eight-cent rate increase, according to Glenn Smith, the JUHS business manager.

Mrs. Ruth Boudinot opposed approval of the tax rate. She opposed any increase and said she was displeased with a boost in the rate to bring the Kaiser health plan up to parity with the Cross for employees.

Mrs. Boudinot said she preferred those funds be taken from reserves. Other trustees and administrators said they believed the undistributed reserve fund would be reduced too much.

The district's combined salary-benefits package is considered the most outstanding in the Bay Area, Supt. Edward Morgan said.

Mrs. Boudinot said the district should not offer the top pay and benefits when it is only average in wealth.

Except for trustee Al Teglia, others on the board concurred with Mrs. Boudinot that a ceiling should be imposed on benefits.

Fire Damages D.C. Home

Fire caused an estimated $15,000 damage to a home at 43 Southdale Ave., Daly City, Monday.

Although flame damage was confined to the bedroom and a hallway, there was heavy smoke damage throughout the home of Miss L. B. Henry, a fire department official said.

Miss Henry was at work at Mary's Help Hospital when the flames were discovered by a neighbor, Mrs. Roger Watts of 37 Southdale Ave. at 1:18 p.m.

Battalion Chief Wayne Alexander estimated damage at $10,000 to the structure and $5,000 to contents.

Bruno School Tax Rate Cut

San Bruno Park School District trustees have pared down their tax-rate by 21 cents per $100 valuation.

They approved a budget of $5,961,975—$472,627 higher than last year.

They were aided by the greatest growth in assessed valuation of any district in San Mateo County. The district's assessed valuation grew from $59.1 million to $722.8 million in its secured roll — real estate — and from $34.9 million to $38.3 million in its unsecured roll — mostly aircraft and airport equipment.

The new tax-rate is $3.04 per $100 valuation — still one of the highest in San Mateo County.

St. Clair Asks for Hearing

County Supervisor Robert St. Clair, angry because his fellow supervisors refused to listen to his objections to the proposed Skyline National Parkway, said he will express his views to a congressional subcommittee.

St. Clair, a former supporter of the project, announced Tuesday that he had decided that he did not want the scenic roadway to cut through the wildlife preserve of the San Francisco-owned watershed. He said he feared that the road, which would extend northward from the junction of Skyline and Half Moon Bay Road near Skylawn Cemetery, would despoil the area.

Supervisor Jean Fassler gave him a sound scolding for his flip-flop and it was decided "at the matter would be discussed further Thursday in an effort to resolve their differences, prior to a hearing to be held by the House subcommittee on Parks and Recreation in San Francisco Monday.

Public Hearing Monday on Tanforan Expansion

A public hearing on the controversial expansion program of Tanforan Park Shopping Center will be held at next Monday's meeting of the San Bruno City Council.

Although the expansion itself is being greeted with enthusiasm from virtually all quarters, there are certain details of it which caused it to squeeze past the planning commission on a 3-2 vote.

The Hapsmith Co. is seeking a revision in its Planned Development zoning to permit it to:

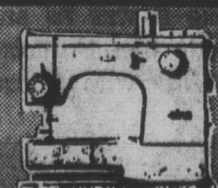

1. Build a three-story parking structure between Huntington Avenue and Penneys.
2. Add a third major department store — the Emporium.
3. Add a "grand mall" to link the present covered mall to the Emporium.
4. Add a 10,000 square foot "free-standing" building in what is now the parking lot, fronting on El Camino Real.
5. A westward extension of the covered mall, extending it out toward El Camino Real.

Opposition to the particular plan was based on the shopping center's proposal to cut its landscaping from 7.5 to 6.5 per cent of the area, reduce its parking requirements to 4.5 cars per 1000 square feet and to be excused from the requirement for double striping all parking stalls.

Also to be heard Monday is an appeal from a denial by the planning commission for a 38-unit apartment-duplex development on Cunningham Way, formerly old Junipero Serra. Neighbors on adjoining Hawthorne Avenue have protested the project and planners criticized the plan as requesting variances while providing for no amenities in exchange. Robert Berryman, former Consolidated Lands Co. partner, stressed the low density, 21 to 22 units per acre, proposed widening of the street, plus extensive landscaping.

Among pending matters that may also be considered by the councilmen is a wage settlement with the Firefighters Local. The union is meeting Thursday, 3 p.m. with city representatives.

Residence Damaged

A fire Saturday afternoon did an estimated $20,000 in damages to the John Kollmann family's home in Millbrae while Mr. and Mrs. Kollmann were reportedly vacationing in the Russian River area.

The fire apparently started when their 23-year-old son left an open can of gasoline unattended while he went to a store to purchase parts for a car he was working on in the family's garage.

Inspector Ed Williams of the Millbrae Fire Department said the gasoline was evidently too close to a water heater and ignited at about 3:45 p.m. The house, located at 1150 Fernwood, subsequently caught fire.

He said nine firemen brought the blaze under control in about 15 minutes.

Millbrae City Tax Rate Is Lowered Slightly

A tax rate that is actually lower than last year's was adopted last week by the Millbrae City Council.

One former councilman made it clear, however, that it will actually look like an increase to most homeowners, because the County Assessor's office has raised the assessed value of most homes.

City Administrator Richard Watson explained that the new, slightly lower rate, will finance a $3,528,459 budget approx-mately equal to last year's budget, only because of the increase in assessed value.

Watson said the slight decrease in tax rate is made possible by shifting a number of funds within the city's monetary structure. Without these shifts, there would have been a budgetary deficit.

Councilman Bernard Esser said the new city tax rate will be .8494 cents per $100 assessed property value, which is .057 cents less than the 1970-71 rate.

Former Mayor Charles Yetter challenged the Council to publicly admit that this was no real tax decrease.

"This is not exactly a tax decrease, because of the increase in assessed valuation," he said.

"I'm going to pay more taxes on my house, so it's not a tax decrease,"

"No argument," answered Councilman Esser.

Mayor O'Connor pointed out that no one had said it was a tax decrease.

"The cost of government has gone up," he said.

O'Connor said Millbrae does have the lowest city tax rate in San Mateo county, and the lowest combined tax of city and school districts.

Watson said his budget would have been $104,076 out of balance, had he not found ways to shift funds.

"Surpluses" will be taken from hotel-motel tax funds, and from capital improvement funds, and gasoline tax funds will be directed entirely toward local street maintenance projects, in order to make up the difference.

In addition, said Watson, the Council will have to spend some thought on how to allot hotel-motel taxes, and sales taxes, before the year is out. Both special taxes now are partly apportioned to specific purposes.

Councilmen authorized staff members to prepare new specifications for narrowing a section of Broadway, and to be ready to call for bids on the project at the group's September 7 meeting. Estimated cost is $38,000.

An approval by the City's Planning Commission, of development plans for the Millbrae "Spur" property caused Councilman Harold Purpus to urge immediate action on part of the plan.

D.C. Freeway Interchange Wins Another Top Award

The Cabrillo Interchange on Interstate Route 280—Junipero Serra Freeway in Daly City—recently won new laurels for its aesthetic design features when it won an award for Engineering Excellence from the Portland Cement Association.

The series of bridges which comprise the interchange with Route 1 fits in with the scenic beauty of the area by utilizing soft, sweeping lines, rounded soffits and tapered columns to reduce the visual impact of the structures and give an illusion of thinness.

A winner of several previous awards for aesthetically pleasing design, the interchange has been described as embodying a "new look" in the bridge structures which combine beauty with functional utility.

The interchange was designed by the California Division of Highways' Bridge Department in Sacramento. The entry for the award was submitted by the Daly City Chamber of Commerce.

Official recognition of the award was in the form of a certificate which was presented to

Landing Rules to Cut Noise

New "visual approach" procedures for jetplanes, landing at San Francisco International Airport from the east have been activated by the airport's Sound Abatement Committee.

Chairman W. E. Newell, a Western Airlines captain, said the new procedures will be announced to all airline pilots by being published in the charts they use for making airport approaches.

As outlined to the Sound Abatement Committee, pilots of large jets making visual approaches to Runway 28, Right or Left, will be requested to remain over the Bay, north and east of Foster City, until entering their final approach to the airport runways.

Previously, pilots making instrument approaches to these two runways would stay north and east of Foster City, but pilots flying "on visual," could fly where they deemed suitable. According to Federal Aviation Administration standards when visibility is good, pilots may fly by what they see. In bay weather pilots must fly by instrument flight rules and are more or less confined to certain airways.

Residents of Foster City and the outer San Mateo areas have complained that jets approaching the airport too often flew farther inshore than is necessary and thus contributed to noise pollution and annoyance in the area.

Now, said Newell, pilots will be asked to keep their planes offshore, even when visibility is good, and thus give a break to homeowners below.

He said that pilots will be requested to approach the airport in such a manner that all maneuvering (which sometimes involves noisy readjustment of engines) be accomplished while the planes are 2000 or more feet above ground level.

The new procedures will apply to the three and four-engine jets, but not to the smaller twin engine aircraft, which are less noisy.

Captain Newell noted that the new procedures will require extra caution from pilots as they converge on a narrow approach area off Foster City to avoid the possibility of mid-air collisions.

Safety of airline passengers is a pilot's first responsibility, he suggested, and must take precedence over all other considerations.

Colma Creek Report Due

A report by the Army Corps of Engineers on the feasibility of a Colma Creek flood control project is expected within two weeks, Deputy County Engineer V. K. Sanders said last week.

The report may determine whether the Colma Creek Flood Control Zone, established in 1964, will undertake a major project.

The corps at one time made a finding that a federally funded project would be feasible by diverting the creek through the South San Francisco industrial area. There was so much opposition, however, that the proposal was killed. The corps then agreed to re-study the possibility of a project along the existing creek alignment.

The zone, which covers most of northern San Mateo County, was enlarged this week with the annexation of Colma and 70 acres that was de-annexed from Colma and annexed to Daly City a year ago. Sanders said the action completes the formation of the zone, which now includes all of the land that drains into the creek.

When the zone was created seven years ago, Colma chose to stay out. Recently, however, the city petitioned for annexation.

Beach Plan Fails

County Supervisor Robert St. Clair failed last week in an attempt to reinstate official consideration of plans for private development of North Montara Beach.

St. Clair said the Board of Supervisors made a mistake previously when it asked the Planning Commission to take no action on any of the proposals of the land-owner, Deane and Deane Inc.

Deane and Deane plans a country club type of development around a championship golf course. Two holes of the course, plus a clubhouse and hotel would be west of Cabrillo Highway on a 38-acre parcel the county wants to acquire from the owner for public use.

Several residents of the area told the supervisors last week that they favored a joint development — the golf course and the public beach. A mass meeting in the area on the problem was ordered by the board and is being planned by county officials. In the meantime, the board asked the Planning Commission to take no action on the developer's plans.

"I am beginning to question," St. Clair said last week, "that the best policy of the board is to go on the idea that we want the state to come in and develop that whole area west of the highway into an asphalt parking lot and all."

He made a motion that the board rescind its previous instructions to the commission and to encourage consideration of joint development. St. Clair submitted a letter from James L. Kuebelbeck, a Deane and Deane vice president, pledging the owner's "willingness to cooperate with the county and state in providing beach access, parking and permanent use of the beach area by the public."

The motion failed to receive a majority vote, however. Mrs. Jean Fassler, who voted against it, said the action taken by the board last week protects the interest of both sides. She noted that plans are being made for the community meeting.

County Manager M. D. Tarshes said he and Jack Brook, acting director of parks and recreation, would be meeting with representatives of the developer today to hear the details of their offer.

Chase Ends in Arrest

A 29-year-old Salt Lake City man was arrested by South San Francisco police last week after a nine-minute chase with speeds approaching 100 miles an hour into Daly City and Colma.

Booked for auto theft was Larry Paul Chorn. He was apprehended after abandoning the car he was driving at 1500 Hillside Boulevard, Colma. The car is believed stolen from the San Mateo area.

Police said there were no injuries nor property damage as a result of the pursuit.

According to police, Officer Dan Cabrera saw a station wagon traveling at an excessive rate of speed on El Camino Real. He gave chase. The driver of the station wagon refused to stop.

Officer Cabrera received aid from Daly City and Broadmoor units as the suspect vehicle continued through those cities' streets. Police made the arrest at about 4 a.m. when Cabrera jumped from the car on Hillside Boulevard.

COFFEE AND POLITICS — The League of Women Voters of North County don't spend all their time on politics. Here Mrs. John Walter of Daly City, left, and Mrs. Ronald Carrick of South San Francisco, get another cup of coffee from Mrs. Jordan Bloom of San Bruno. The trio is planning a dessert and coffee gathering at 8 p.m. August 18 for new members. An attempt is being made to interest the 18 to 21-year-old woman voter. Further information may be obtained by calling the League at 355-4408.

Morgans Step into Cow Palace Show

The horse show event of the 1971 Grand National Exposition, October 22 through 31 at San Francisco's Cow Palace, has added a Morgan Horse division, according to Joseph G. Moore, chairman of the Horse Show Committee and a member of the Cow Palace board of directors.

Performance classes for the Morgans will include English Pleasure Horse Stake, Western Pleasure Horse Stake, Park Saddle Stake, Park Harness Horse Stake, Pleasure Combination Stake and Cavalcade of American Class.

A breeding division of Morgan stallions, mares and geldings will also be held.

The full Morgan show will be held October 24, and there will be two special classes as well, including tack rooms and grooms' prizes. Entries for all horse show events will close on September 24.

This year the arena show will feature the Royal Canadian Mounted Police and their famous musical ride, and the annual rodeo featuring the nation's top cowboys.

NELL NORTON Sugar 'n Spice

Good morning, good cooks.
We will reverse the order today, start off with a delicious dessert and finish with a prize winning meat dish. This dessert is light and frothy with a topping of frozen raspberries.

RASPBERRY DANISH DESSERT

Stage I
1½ cups crushed graham crackers (20 crackers)
¼ cup butter (melted)
¼ cup sugar
Combine the one and one-half cups crumbs with the fourth cup each melted butter and sugar. Pat into 9x13-inch pan. Bake 375 degrees for 7 minutes. Cool.
Stage II
1 pkg. raspberry gelatin
1 cup boiling water
3 tablespoons lemon juice
1 pkg. cream cheese (8 ounces)
1 cup sugar
1 tablespoon vanilla
1 large can evaporated milk (chilled)

Dissolve the package gelatin in one cup boiling water, add three tablespoons lemon juice. Cool until syrupy, then beat until light. Cream the eight ounces cream cheese with the one cup sugar and one tablespoon vanilla. Combine with gelatin. Whip the large can chilled evaporated milk and blend into the cheese-gelatin mixture. Pour into cool crust and chill until firm. About an hour.

Stage III
1 pkg. Raspberry Danish Dessert
1 cup water
1 pkg. frozen raspberries, partially thawed

Cook the dessert with one cup water. When thick add the partially thawed raspberries and spread over top of filling. Serves 12.

This Bake-Off prize winner is reminiscent of the pepper steak of the Far East, finished off with mustardy muffins on top. A one and a half hour masterpiece.

STEAK BAKE

1½ pounds cube or sirloin steak, cut in narrow strips
One-third cup flour
1 teaspoon salt
¼ teaspoon pepper
1 onion, sliced
1 green pepper, sliced

1 can (4 oz.) mushroom stems and pieces, drained
3 tablespoons molasses
3 tablespoons soy sauce
1 pkg. (10 oz.) frozen French-cut beans, thawed and drained
1 tablespoon sesame seeds
OVEN 400 degrees.

Place the one and one-half pounds steak in 2½ quart casserole. Sprinkle with the one-third cup flour, fourth teaspoon pepper and teaspoon salt. Toss to coat meat. Bake uncovered at 400 degrees for 20 minutes.

Add the one sliced onion and green pepper, one can tomatoes, one can mushrooms, three tablespoons each molasses and soy sauce; mix well. Cover and bake 400 degrees for 30 minutes.

Stir in the beans. Drop Tangy Muffins by tablespoons onto hot meat mixture; sprinkle with sesame seeds. Bake for 15 to 18 minutes.

TANGY MUFFINS

1¼ cups all purpose flour
1½ teaspoons baking powder
1 teaspoon dry mustard
½ teaspoon salt
½ cup milk
2 tablespoons cooking oil

Judge F. J. de Larios of San Mateo County's Northern District Municipal Court was re-elected secretary of the National Conference of Special Court Judges at the American Bar Association convention in New York.

The organization is made up of judicial officers from all over the United States.

"The courts presided over by members of our conference perform more than 90 per cent of the judicial business in this country and their importance to the people measured in terms of how well they succeed in dispensing justice," Judge de Larios said. "Our conference will continue to help in improving the standards by which we all work in the courts."

Active in the affairs of the conference, Judge de Larios has participated in seminars and institutes as an instructor in several areas of the United States, specializing in the fields of court administration and of sentencing and probation.

He has been a judge since 1963.

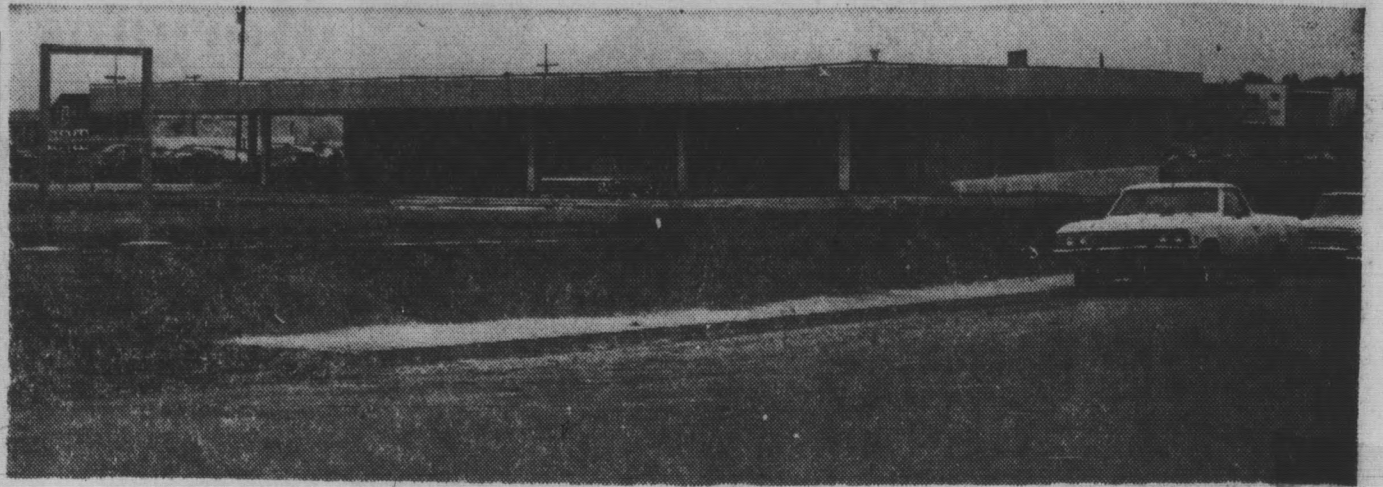

New Allstate Office Construction Started

Construction is underway on the Allstate Insurance Company's new 12,000 square foot sales and claim office in Serramonte Plaza, Daly City. It will serve the Greater San Francisco area, from Menlo Park in the south to Santa Rosa in the north.

The one-story contemporary building, designed by Crocker Land Company architect John Badgley, is being built by Associated Construction and Engineering Company.

When completed, the office will replace the current Allstate facility at 2121 19th Avenue in San Francisco, and will include a large Drive-In Claim department.

More than 100 Allstate employees are expected to occupy the modern and spacious facility in November.

NEW STATE DIVISION OF HIGHWAYS building at Daly City Civic Center nears completion. Present offices at Southgate Ave. and Park Plaza Drive will close when building opens this month. (Post Photo)

If you can't come to us, we'll come to you.

It's one thing to save empty Lucky bottles and cans for recycling. It's another to get them back to a collection center. We know from letters and phone calls that some people have problems in getting empties back to us, so we're bringing a collection center to you.

Now there's a Lucky mobile recycling center. The center will be driven to a new location every day.

You get the same money at the mobile center as you do at the regular collection centers... 1¢ each for empty Lucky beer bottles and 1/2¢ each for empty Lucky beer cans. (If you bring in bottles by the case-load, we pay, 25¢ for every 24-bottle case.)

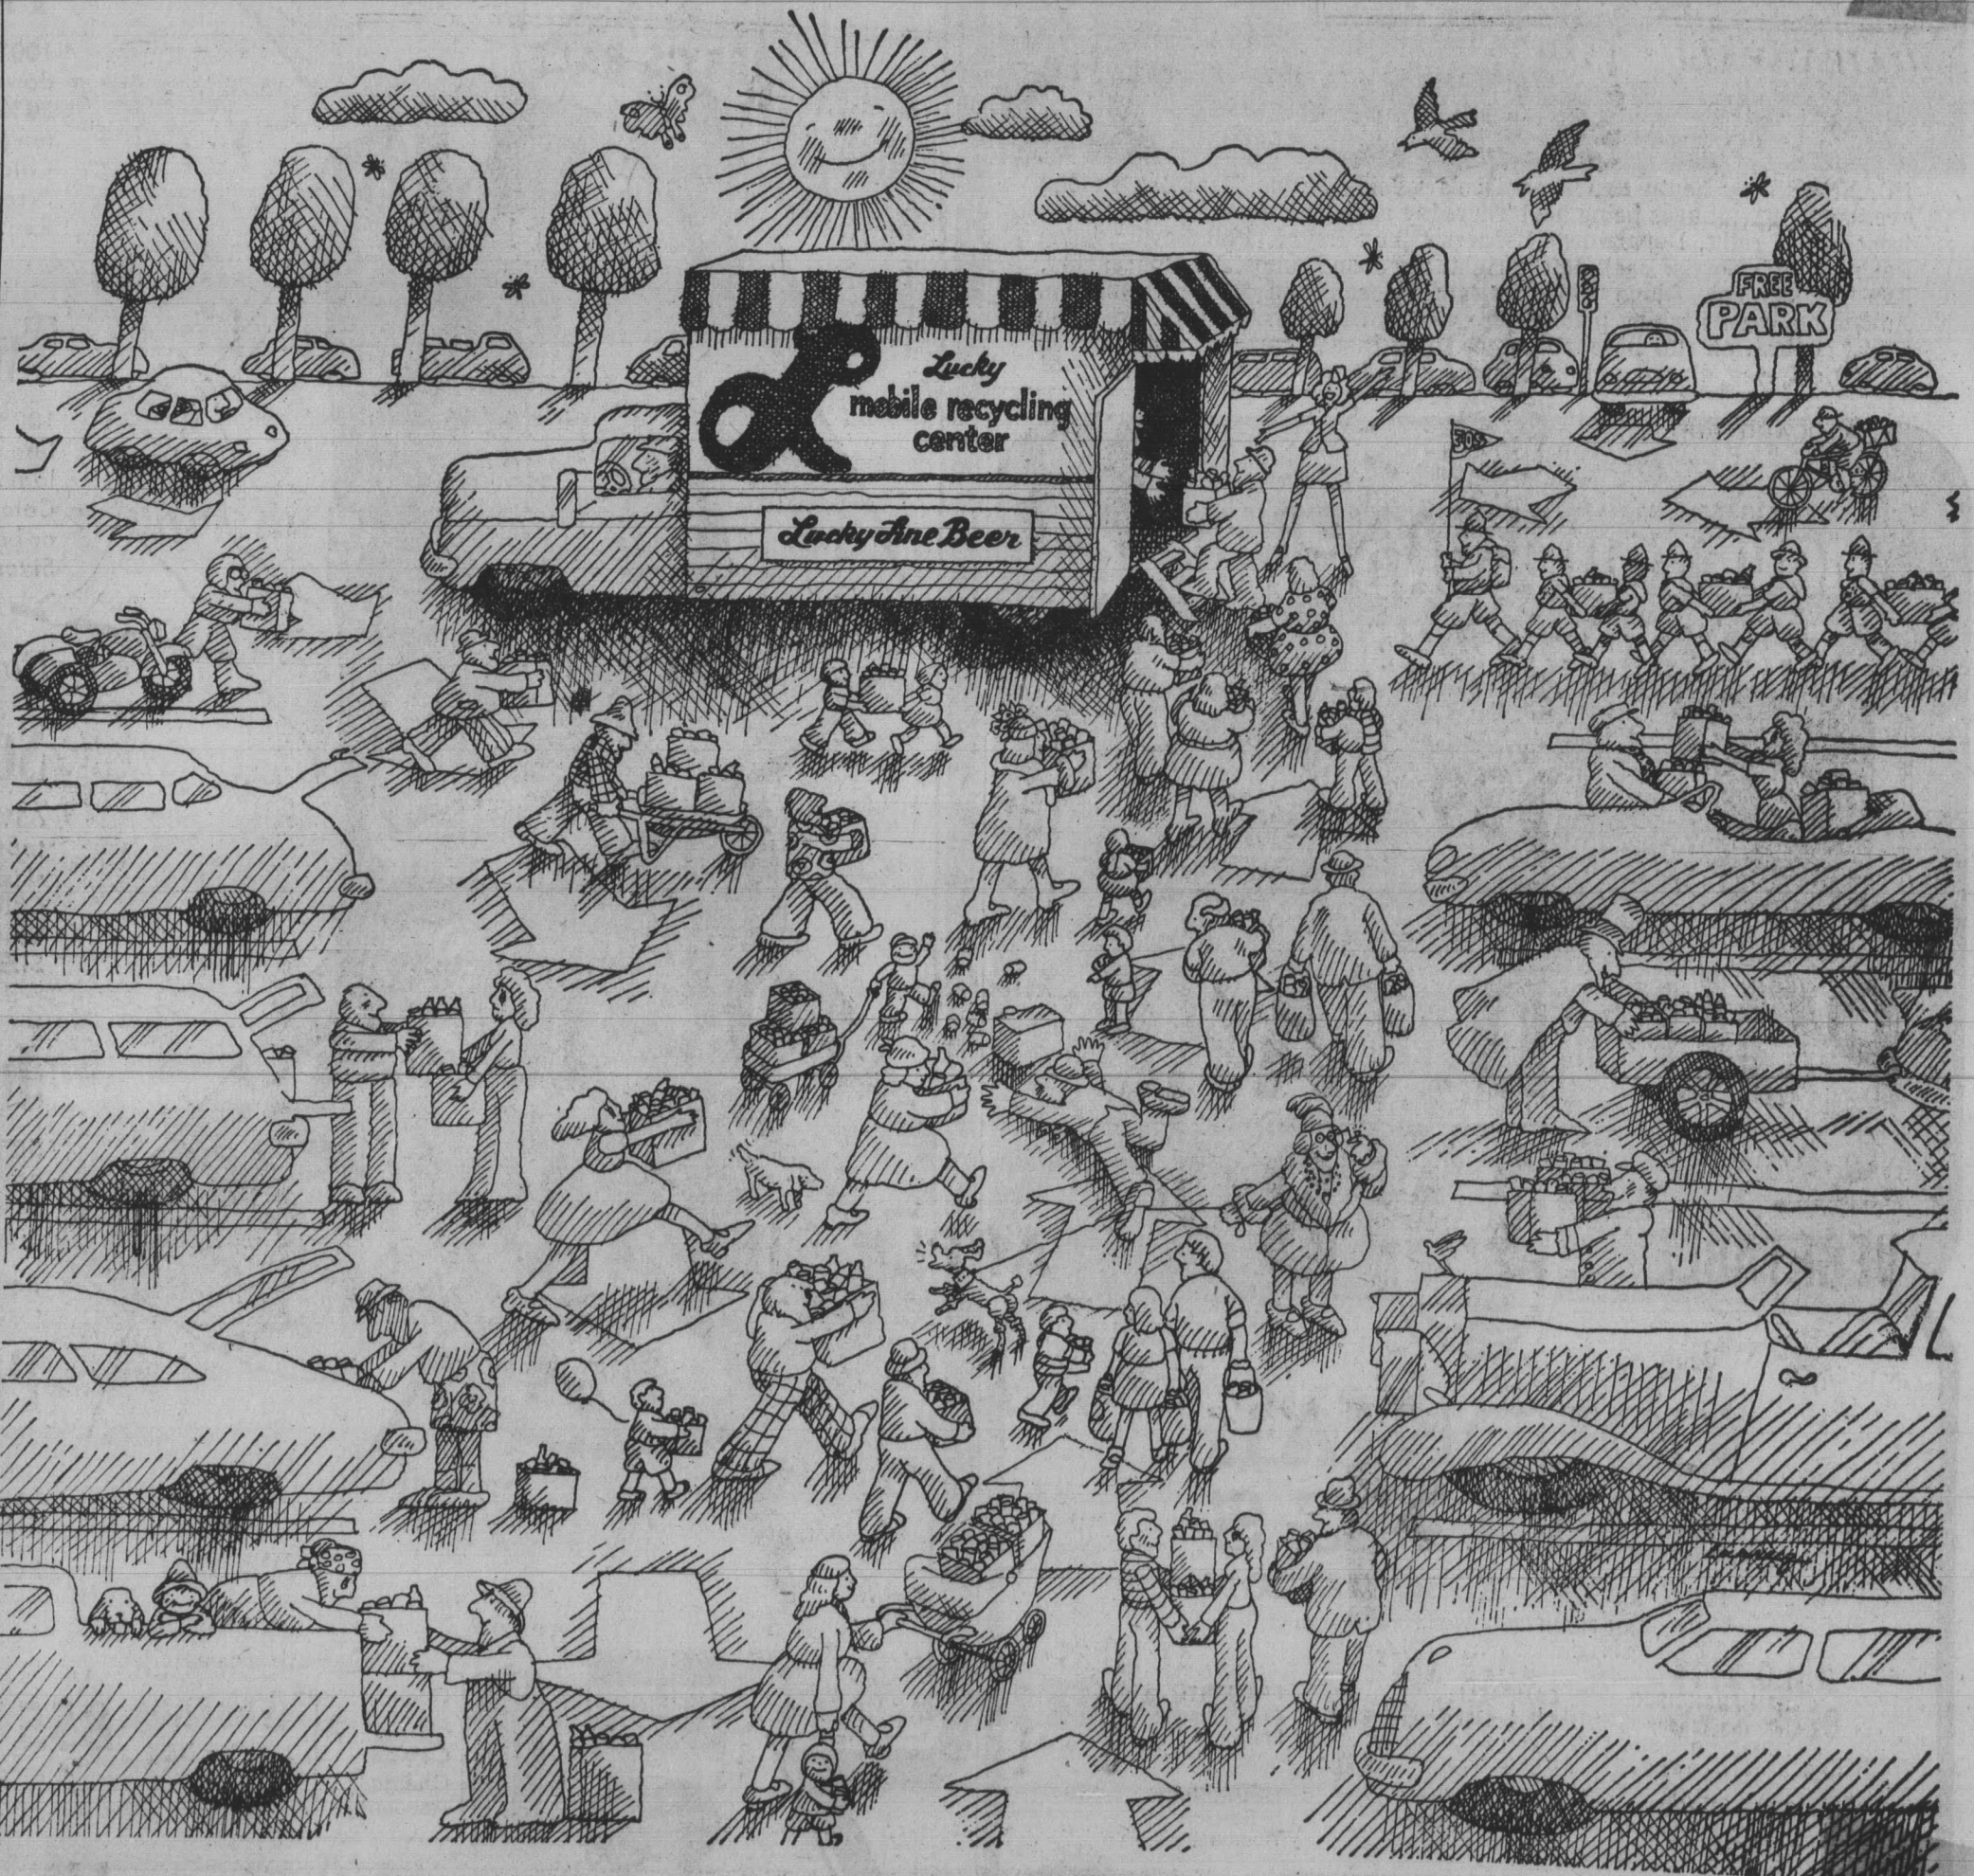

Our new mobile recycling center makes it even easier for you to join in this important program. You might be interested to know that the Lucky recycling program for all our bottles and cans is already a great success. We were the first brewery around here to buy back all our bottles and cans and in a very short time the public has recycled more than 10 million Lucky containers. That's progress.

County HRC Offers Services to Cities

The services of the County Human Relations Commission are being offered to the county's 19 cities.

"Regardless of the racial and religious composition of our cities," said Executive Director James E. Forrest, "no city is immune from unfairness, bigotry or undue discrimination."

He said he hopes to expand the activities of his agency into the cities to help them prevent problems from arising.

"Historically," he explained, "we wait until something happens, and then we act. Hopefully, by taking the right steps now, we can anticipate problems and prevent them from happening."

"There is no geographical area that is not now or soon will be faced with some degree of social and perhaps socio-economic problems," Forrest added.

He said the county commission has received many complaints from residents of cities concerning police contacts, alleged discrimination in civil service testing and hiring procedures and in housing.

"There are cities in the county in which there are systematic efforts to exclude minorities from housing," Forrest said. "Sometimes these efforts are too subtle to be proved in a legal way but we know they exist. We have received complaints about housing discrimination from practically every city in the county."

It is in those areas — police-community relations, employment and housing — that the county group wants to concentrate at first in its work with the cities, Forrest said.

Two cities — San Mateo and San Carlos — have human relations commissions. The offer of cooperation is being extended to them as well as to the other cities, according to Forrest. In letters sent to each of the 19 mayors, Forrest pointed out that when the county commission was established in 1968 the Board of Supervisors declared it to be the policy of the county "to take affirmative action to provide equality of opportunity to each of its citizens and to eliminate prejudice and discrimination because of race, religion, color or place of birth."

Auto Fire

Extinguished

Don Bass stopped his auto transport truck half a block from the South San Francisco Fire Department's central station to have a blaze in a scrapped vehicle atop the carrier extinguished yesterday.

The truck driver was on Bayshore Freeway at 6:40 p.m. when another motorist honked his horn and alerted Bass to the fact one of the junked cars on his truck was afire.

Seafood Poisons Daly City Man

It's doubtful Daly City service station owner Patrick Gaerlan ever will touch another clam or mussel.

Gaerlan was once so fond of the bivalve mollusks he often got up before the sun and tramped up and down the coast-side beaches in search of the delectable seafood.

But the events of Thursday have changed his seafood hunting habits and his diet, according to his pretty wife, Pacita.

On that day, accompanied by his younger brother, Michael, and another friend, Gaerlan went to Pacifica's Rockaway Beach area and gathered enough clams and mussels to make a hearty feast of bouillabaisse for lunch.

Not one of the three were aware of the Public Health Service's warning that a quarantine had been imposed on the mollusks between May and October because of the possibility those eating them might suffer the effects of mussel poisoning.

Gaerlan took the mussels back to the service station where the three men pitched in and cleaned them before dropping them into some boiling water.

Young Michael ate only four of the mussels while Patrick, 25, downed some two dozen.

The third member of the trio, who was not identified by Mrs. Gaerlan, likewise ate only a token amount — perhaps three clams.

SSF Kaiser Administrator

Miss June Finsterle has been appointed administrator of the South San Francisco Kaiser-Permanente Medical Center at Grand and Spruce Avenues. She succeeds Mrs. Dorothy Broderick, who has retired.

Miss Finsterle was assistant administrator at Hackensack Hospital in New Jersey for the past ten years.

SSF Rec Meet Set

The regular meeting of the South San Francisco Recreation Commission will be held at 7:30 Thursday night, at the city hall, according to Chairman George Coulter.

When Mrs. Gaerlan visited her husband about 3:15 p.m. he was complaining of a "numbness in his fingers and back."

She took him home for a nap. "I thought he only had an upset stomach. When he got up a few minutes later and asked to go to the hospital I knew something very bad was wrong," the pregnant mother of a small child explained.

Dr. Anthony Cosentino of St. Mary's Hospital worked feverishly to save Gaerlan's life after he determined the man was suffering the effects of nerve poisoning from the mussels.

Within 45 minutes after arriving at the San Francisco hospital from his home at 41 Park Plaza Drive, Gaerlan had stopped breathing.

Dr. Cosentino said his patient was completely paralyzed from the effects of the poison.

A respirator was used to aid the victim in breathing. The apparatus is credited with saving his life.

There is no known antidote for the poison that attacks the central nervous system.

Of the state's reported 391 cases of mussel poisoning in modern times, 30 persons have died.

Incidents of mussel poisoning are considered rare, but the Public Health Service annually warns citizens to ignore the clams and mussels during the summer period.

Once a person poisoned reaches a crucial period the effects gradually wear off. There are normally no permanent effects from the poison.

A hospital spokesman said Gaerlan was "out of danger and much improved" today after his close brush with death.

Patrick's younger brother and his friend suffered no ill effects from the mussels.

Tanforan Okehs Lot For Graham

What does Billy Graham have to do with Tanforan Park Shopping Center?

Well, one thing is parking lot No. 2 at the shopping center. It happened this way.

Calvary Community Church, 270 West San Bruno Avenue, in San Bruno has been preparing for over a year to take a very active part in the Billy Graham Crusade at the Oakland Coliseum, July 23 to August 1.

Part of the planning included reserving ten charter buses from the American Sightseeing Tours in order to provide a ride to the Crusade for those in Millbrae, San Bruno, South San Francisco, Colma, Daly City, Brisbane, and Pacifica. The church has already placed 51,000 invitations on the doorknobs of the homes in these cities.

One problem facing Calvary Community Church was where to park the hundred cars of people coming to ride the buses to the Crusade.

A telephone call and visit to The Tanforan Park Shopping Center provided the answer to this problem.

Not All Crafts Need Be Indoors

Not all crafts need to be done indoors. It is desirable to have projects of the type that can be moved about to take advantage of any opportunity the children have to enjoy the sunshine. One of the indoor-outdoor activities which can be an on-going nature is sanding.

If you aren't acquainted with it, sandpaper comes in a number of "grades" ranging from very coarse to emery paper which is so fine it hardly resembles the stereotype most people cherish of "sand paper." Next time you are near a hardware store buy a sheet or two of the heaviest grade, a like amount of the emery paper and one of two sheets of grades somewhere between the two extremes.

You will probably be taken by surprise by the way children are drawn to sandpaper. They like looking at it, rubbing their fingers over it, gingerly, and they like to sand wooden blocks.

Collect wood scraps from your husband's workshop or from the neighbor's and store them away for the day your favorite members of the younger generation seem to need calming down. Sanding is great "therapy."

CUT THE SHEETS OF sandpaper in small squares and let the kids work away on the scraps. The rough feel of the unsanded wood will slowly begin to smooth out and that transformation fascinates children. The changing feel of the wood and the fresh smell of the wood dust holds the attention of even the most boisterous offspring. Sanding can be done indoors on the plastic drop cloths or out of doors but, either place, be sure to have a box for the wood to go into after they have completed their sanding. There is a good chance that the sanding will be redone several times before your child is satisfied with the finished product but to give him a sense of personal satisfaction and a feeling of accomplishment be sure that he has a separate place to keep the "finished" pieces.

Once your supply has been sanded, at least once, your child may be open to a suggestion for a bit of wood sculpture constructed of sanded wooden blocks. Find a square of plywood, a bottle of glue and let the child glue the sanded blocks onto the plywood base at any angle that seems to suit his artistic sense. Towers can raise, bridges can span wooden valleys and stock figures can march about on the stage, but whatever, be sure it is the youngster's idea and not yours.

SOME CHILDREN become so absorbed in creating a collage that the collecting of items to include and the gluing process may go on for several days. Don't be at all startled if the finished product is so attractive that you want to hang it in your family room, or, if you have used mostly kitchen oriented objects, in the dining room. Several coats of white paint on a collage of this type can transform a child's art project into a modern wall hanging that will have your neighbors seeking to match it.

Tom Powell Shunning the Glup

Those who devise recipes for a living seem to have one thing in common—they all fight to see who can come up with the most exotic and goopy sauce to put over a perfectly good cut of meat.

Well, the gastronomical maverick is here to shoot off on another tangent.

Carefully chosen meat properly barbecued has a flavor so remarkable that coating it with tomato glup is a waste of money. Might as well be barbecuing hog back or beef shin.

Usually, when I barbecue pork, a beef roast or turkey, I coat it lightly with a favorite seasoning salt and nothing else. I also use a thermometer and place the meat on the spit about five inches from the coals. Once in a while, I add a few coals to keep the fire good and hot—but that's all the effort put into it. When the thermometer indicates the desired internal temperature (described in several good barbecue cookbooks) I simply take it off and serve. It's one of the easiest ways to cook and the most rewarding.

The seasoning salt seems to bring out the natural flavor of the meat without overpowering it.

Last week, I prepared a boneless, rolled pork roast, cooked in this fashion to 185 degrees. With a little applesauce on the side—what can I say?

ARTICHOKE-CRAB RICE SALAD

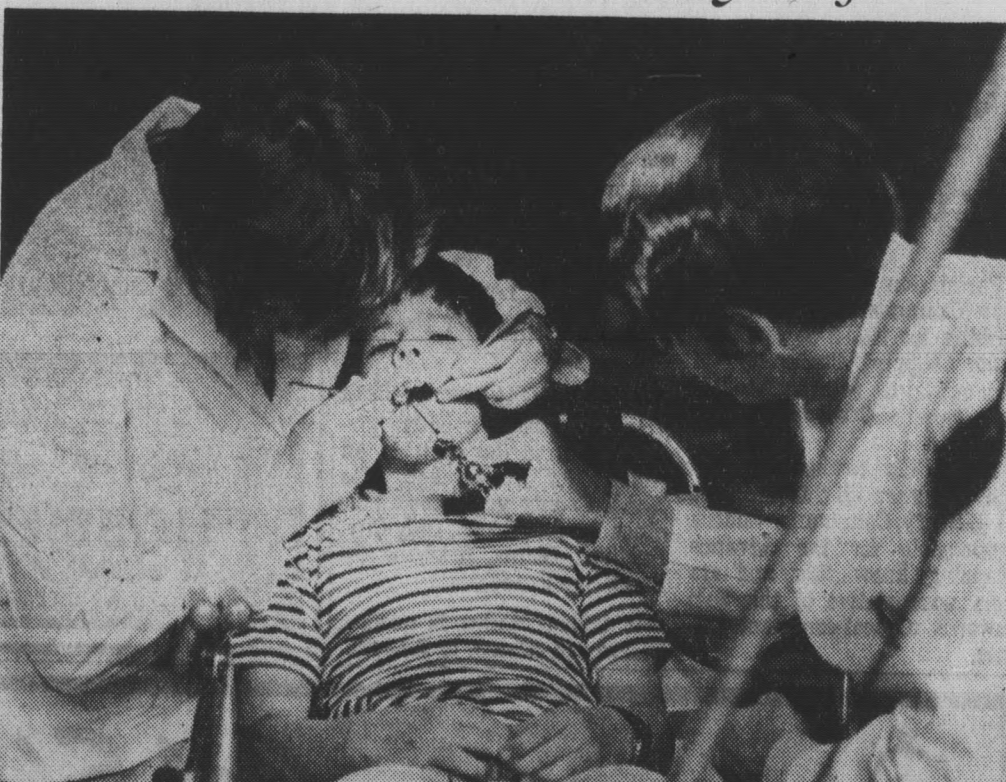

- 1 cup commercial sour cream
- 1 teaspoon dry mustard
- About 1/4 teaspoon freshly ground black pepper
- 2 tablespoons dry white wine
- 1 1/2 tablespoons fresh lemon juice
- 2-3 cup long grain white rice, cooked just until tender, rinsed, and drained
- 3 hard-cooked eggs, coarsely grated
- 2 small cans (2 1/4 ounces each) sliced black olives, drained (or 1 can sliced olives and 1/2 cup whole olives)
- 5 green onions with part of green tops, finely sliced
- 3 tablespoons chopped fresh parsley
- 3 ounces blue cheese, coarsely crumbled
- Crisp lettuce leaves
- 1/2 to 1 pound fresh or canned crabmeat
- 1 can (14 ounces) artichoke hearts, drained and chilled
- Lemon wedges

Mix sour cream, mustard, pepper, wine, and lemon juice to make a dressing. Pour it over rice, eggs, olives, onions, parsley, and cheese; toss lightly but thoroughly. Taste and add salt if necessary. Cover and chill thoroughly. At serving time, arrange salad on lettuce leaves. Arrange crab, artichokes, and lemon wedges on top or alongside. Squeeze on lemon juice to taste as you eat. Makes 4 to 6 servings.

ANNE CARR

The prospective bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Christian G. Kobel and the brother of Mrs. Ulrich Gmach, Hans Ulrich and Marianne Kobel, all of Switzerland.

A Mills High School alumna, Anne has attended Occidental College where she was affiliated with Gamma Kappa Theta sorority. In September she plans to enroll at the American College of Switzerland in Leysin.

Andre attended local Swiss schools and received his bachelor's degree in electrical engineering at the College of Technology in Bern where he belonged to Kyburgia fraternity. He will be transferred overseas by his employers later this year.

The couple will be married in Switzerland next summer and make a home in Europe.

Oil Leasing May Be Big Gamble

By LORENE BEASLEY

As long as people want to gamble, oil leasing services will find clients. A statement from a 1967 Wall Street Journal clearly states: "Most oil and gas leasing experts agree that about 90 percent of the leases acquired through Federal drawings prove unsalable, and only about 3 percent can be sold for a worthwhile profit."

The advertisements placed by many oil leasing services in popular magazines and trade journals apparently attract the average wage earner or working man who knows very little about the oil business. The information supplied to prospective clients who answered the advertisements is generally factual but practically all emphasize the exceptional cases rather than the "usual or most likely to occur."

Leasing services do perform a service for their clients by selecting parcels of land for their clients and filing their application. For this a fee of usually $12 to $15 per application is charged and probably interest on money advanced for the first year's annual delay rental if a client wins a lease.

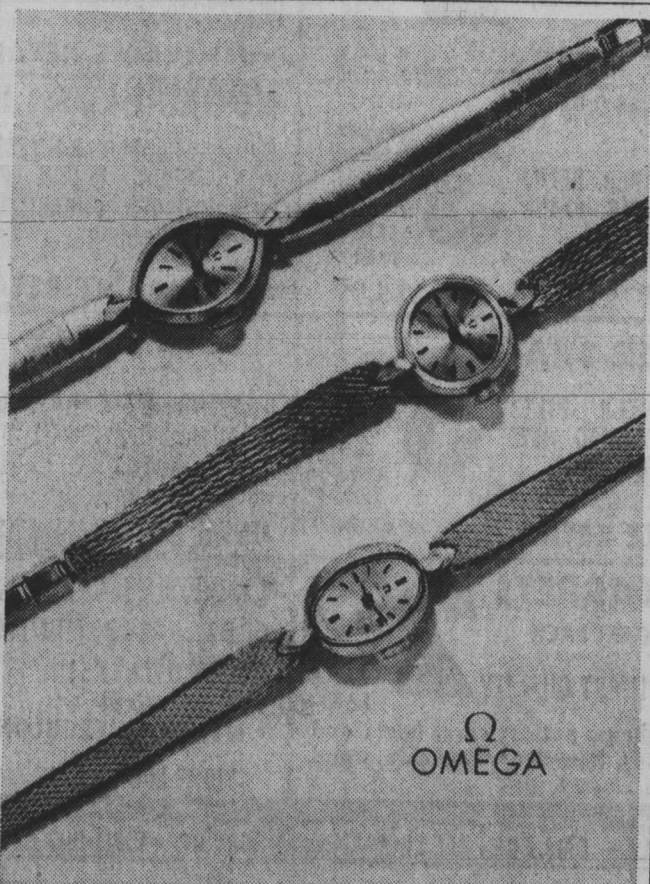

There are some leasing services provided by truly professional oil men who concentrate on the knowledgeable investors as clients. The professionals use the current leasing laws on federal lands to make money for their clients and hopefully, for themselves also. An unscrupulous organization bent on earning service fees at $10 or $12 per filing would be more inclined to file on a volume basis rather than on a geologic basis (i.e. having a competent geologist or engineer review the filing area to determine its potential mineral value from a scientific standpoint).

The public is generally unaware of the fact that the reason federal lands are usually offered for simultaneous filing is that the previous lessee thought them geologically unfavorable or that the expense of maintaining the lease by annual rental payment was not justified.

Not all federal lands are available for simultaneous filings, only those which were previously subject to an oil and gas lease and the lease has been surrendered, expired or otherwise terminated. Federal land which is unleased (no lease which just terminated for some reason) can be leased by the first person or company to file an application for a lease.

There is no drawing, simply the first one to file gets the lease. If the federal land is in an area of established oil potential such as off-setting a lease on which there is production, it will be on a KGS, a known geologic structure as designated by the U.S. Geological Survey.

'Un-Enchanted' Opens

Millbrae's first original musical production, "The Un-Enchanted Prince," will officially open Friday night, Aug. 13 at the Millbrae Players Theatre, 355 Broadway in Millbrae.

The show will be playing Friday and Saturday nights at 8:30 p.m.

Preview performances were held last week in order to give audiences an opportunity to register comments on the current production.

The play is a joint effort of playwright Michael Kohl and composer Jeff Colton, both of San Francisco.

It has been adapted, produced, and directed by director Jean Rechtfertig of Pacifica, presently resident director for the Players, one of the oldest little theatre groups in the Bay Area.

"The Un-Enchanted Prince" is a zany timeless rendering of an old fairy tale, with enough music and humor to appeal to all age groups.

Its assembled cast of performers is composed of residents from the Peninsula, Daly City and San Francisco.

Brenda Thompson, 21, of South San Francisco, graduated from Westmoor High in 1968, after having appeared in productions there of "Finian's Rainbow" and "Pajama Game."

At the College of San Mateo, she sang and acted in "Oh, What a Lovely War," sang with the a cappella choir, and worked backstage on "Birthday Party" and "Send Me No Flowers." Since being associated with the Players, she has appeared in "Magic Lamp" and

"Androcles and the Lion." Robert Kotta of 1400 Madera Way, Millbrae, has appeared previously with the Players in "The Curse of an Aching Heart" and "Androcles and the Lion."

A graduate of Serra High School in San Mateo, he was active in high school productions and still found time to play six instruments and dabble in song writing.

Barbara Rechtfertig of Pacifica (wife of the director), majored in music at San Francisco State College, where she also met her husband.

She performed with the Comedia Theatre in Palo Alto, had a feature role in the Players' production of "Dirty Work at the Crossroads" (a melodrama) and a character part in "Magic Lamp," a fantasy recently concluded by the Millbrae group.

Geoffrey Cohen, a native of Los Angeles, presently lives in San Francisco, where he recently was granted his secondary teaching credential at S.F. State College, and is looking for employment in the Bay Area.

Cohen specializes in character roles (in his words, "old men, vivid scoundrels") and won an award for the best Bit Player of 1965-66 at San Fernando Valley State College.

He taught dance at Mt. Tamalpais High School in Mill Valley and recently appeared in the Players' production of "Androcles and the Lion."

Kathleen McIntyre of Daly City received a B.A. degree in dramatic arts from S.F. State College in 1969 and is currently working for her elementary teaching credential.

She recently played the female lead in the Players' production of "Androcles and the Lion."

Previously, she performed with the Oakland Recreation Dept., the S.F. State drama dept., the Alameda Little theatre, and Pacifica Spindrift Players.

J. Stuart McIntyre, a senior in business administration at S.F. State, has appeared locally with the Players in "Androcles and the Lion" and "Cactus Flower" with Altarena.

He has been active in dramatics since elementary school, where he played in his first musical "Snow White."

Kandra Kolvin, 20, of Burlingame, studied at the American Academy of Dramatic Arts in New York for two years and has performed in such productions as "Oklahoma," "Out of This World," "Annie Get Your Gun," "Anniversary Waltz," "The Curious Savage" and "Threepenny Opera."

Pamela Colton, 24, has a B.A. degree from S.F. State College in music, primarily vocal. She met her husband, composer of the musical score of "The Un-Enchanted Prince," while on the campus.

Jeffrey Pels, 8, a resident of Millbrae for four years presently living in Burlingame, has performed in previous original children's plays, playing roles of a turkey, a Thompson seedless grape and a rock and roll dancer.

He previously was a christian in the Players' "Androcles and the Lion."

Musical accompaniment for "The Un-Enchanted Prince" is supplied by Bob Gonnella, 14, of 145 Acacia in San Bruno.

A serious piano student for the past four and a half years, he hopes to become a concert pianist or a conductor.

Student is Pacifica Commissioner

A law student now is a member of the Pacifica Health and Safety Commission.

Mayor Grace McCarthy, at the July 12 city council meeting, appointed Miss Sonja Soehnel, a second year student at the University of San Francisco to the Commission.

She replaces Edward Terry who resigned after five years of service in the group.

Miss Soehnel teaches part time at a San Francisco private school, specializing in remedial reading. She also has taught in the city's elementary schools for four years.

A native of Pasadena, Miss Soehnel has been in Pacifica five years. She is a graduate of Stanford University, a major in literature.

At the University of San Francisco she is co-chairman of the Women's Student Association. One of her projects is urging female students to study law.

Miss Soehnel resides on the Esplanade in the Pacific Manor district.

She attended her first meeting of the commission on July 20. The meeting was held at the Terra Nova High School Cafeteria.

Nathaniel Marks, chairman of the commission said the public is invited to bring health and safety problems at any time for consideration and recommendation for action to the city council. Other commission members are John Geary, Mrs. Pat Robinson and Allen Heyman.

Graduation Set

The Jefferson Union High School District will graduate 57 students at commencement exercises at 8 p.m., Thursday at the Jefferson High School in Daly City.

COLMA PLANNERS — According to Ordinance No. 82, authored a few years back by some present members of the Colma Council, there are six members of the city Planning Commission appointed by the mayor, with the blessings of the city council, apparently. The ordinance was adopted on March 21, 1950.

The Commission membership now includes: Mayor Raymond Ottoni, Sr., City Treasurer Mary V. Ryan, Albert Bernardini, Charles Gerrans, Michael Del Campo and William Patton. Hope that this answers some folks' questions.

WHAT'S THIS RUMOR? About a North County policeman being on the shorts with a couple of "bookie types." Seems the same fellow had a misunderstanding with some Nevada "PR men" not too many years ago. He also donated a considerable sum to the pony track recently. I must have gone into the wrong business. This lowly columnist has to beg the Little Woman for a roll of nickles to play the slots in Reno. We'll have more on this later (and that's a promise).

IN SOUTH CITY, as in many cities of today, the police department has set up a community relations office, sometimes called a community service office, public relations office, ad infinitum. But in South City the official title is "Community Relations and Public Information Office." One merely gets on the phone and in the essence of time asks for the "CRAP" office. Or was it "CRAPPY" office??? No matter, they do a fine job. Better than the title would imply.

WE'VE NOTICED Daly City's new animal law has curbed a considerable amount of the mess that once dotted the landscape (and sidewalks) around the Westlake Shopping Center.

DIDJA GET your water bill this week? Is it kinda confusing? That's because Daly City is using its new computers to dash out those billings. Some of the coding may be slightly different but if you take the time to think it out everything will come through to you. On the other hand if you have a bonafide complaint, take your troubles to the D.C. computer.

LOTS OF PEOPLE often ask me if I don't run out of subject matter from time to time. You know, the gossip that gossips like to read. Truth of the matter, is yes I do. Matter of fact this is one of those weeks when I have neither the time, nor material to fill a column. Sad with is with some of the staff on vacation, others on sick leave and still others (that makes three "staff" members right? Right!) loafing around in this midsummer sunshine-fog, we just can't get with it.

P.S.S. No one's around to read it anyway.

Ho Chi Minh Myths Still Strong in U.S.

This ditty, delivered as a chant, was part "put on," part defiance and part American revolution. The chanters were largely of the young and the new left and their overall effect was to repel rather than attract.

Demonstrators and dissenters failed to cloud our understanding of Ho Chi Minh, but where they failed, others succeeded. Far more complex forces combined to glorify this clever man, and to create an image of him that differed with reality. Briefly stated, conventional wisdom in the United States had it that he was a Vietnamese nationalist. His fundamental Communism was often forgotten.

Ho was something else again. Born in 1890, he carried aliases during his lifetime. His travels took him across the face of the globe and he was an important figure in the history of Communism in France, Russia, China and Vietnam.

In 1920 Ho attended a Socialist Congress at Tours, France. This meeting proved stormy and broke into parts. Ho followed the Communist faction into its session and became a founding member of the French Communist Party. He adopted the name Nguyen Ai Quoc (Nguyen the Patriot).

Nguyen Ai Quoc received training as a Communist organizer in Moscow at the Lenin Institute for Training in the Toiler of the East School. He remained from 1923 through 1925 and was then assigned to Canton, China as a member of the Russian Consulate headed by Borodin.

In this position his title was that of clerk and interpreter, but he really functioned as an organizer of Communist activities in Southeast Asia. Leading Vietnamese nationalists were invited to Canton for study and training, and of these many were converted to Communism. Nguyen Ai Quoc readily embraced the converts, but some, who preferred a different type of nationalism didn't fare as well. These were betrayed to the French.

In 1933 Nguyen Ai Quoc was reported dead and his death was believed to be real by the Vietnamese. Of these, the Communists were grieved, but the nationalists were more restrained in their mourning. In fact, relief was apparent in some quarters and it has been suggested that there was cheering over the "grave" of the betrayer.

When Ho appeared again he was a different man. Tuberculosis, age and prison had taken their toll. He was no longer physically the same person as Nguyen Ai Quoc and Ho did nothing to remind the Vietnamese nationalists of his past. Ho did not admit his prior identity in the public print of Hanoi until 1960.

His reappearance followed years of work under a variety of aliases in Thailand, Malaya and the Soviet Union and a time in a Chinese Nationalist Prison Camp. As Ho Chi Minh he was the hero of liberation against the Japanese and operated as the leader of a broad front, convenient for his immediate purpose.

But a strange thing happened on the way to liberation. Ho, the nationalist, negotiated the return of the French to Vietnam. This was probably done for a variety of reasons, including a desire to get the Chinese who then occupied North Vietnam out of the area. But a more insidious purpose was also present. The Communists in France believed that they could sustain a parliamentary victory in 1946 and had requested that no efforts be made to prevent French troops from returning to Vietnam. Again the term "betrayer" was used when speaking of Nguyen, now Ho.

Ho was a master of change. Not only did he change his own name and identity from time to time, but he altered his organizational base as often as necessity required. Use of popular front vehicles appeared in cycles, depending upon immediate requirements. Sometimes the Communist party was almost submerged, always to reappear in strength when circumstances allowed. Ho surfaced with the Communist remnant and on several occasions adroitly led in the elimi-

Conservation Committee Formed to Protect Bay

By LIN DAY

In the early 1960's, a number of conservationist groups, particularly the Sierra Club and the Audubon Society, joined forces with the Save the Bay Association to press the State Legislature for legislation to curb excess Bay fill.

At that time, developers had revealed plans for vast Bay projects and even talked of filling all of the South Bay below Redwood City.

The Bay had dwindled already by more than a third.

Second in A Series

since the days of Father Serra and Captain de Portola. What was left was full of sewage and debris.

"You'll wonder where the water went if you fill the Bay with sediment," was the message on stacks of postcards sent state assemblymen and senators.

Nevertheless, one piece of legislation after another died in committee, as a growing public concern developed over the ever-increasing, piecemeal filling of the Bay.

Finally, however, the Legislature adopted Senate Bill 14 in the 1964 Special Session; as a result, the San Francisco Bay Conservation Study Commission was created.

It was given three assignments:

1. To ascertain public interest in San Francisco Bay;

2. To study the effects of further filling of the Bay;

3. To recommend to the 1965 Legislature measures to protect the public interest in the Bay.

The Commission, headed by J. Eugene McAteer, San Francisco State Senator, and with its nation of former temporary allies.

When one adds to all this the role of Ho Chi Minh at the time of the Geneva Accords (1954) there can be little doubt of his faithfulness to the Communist cause. Again, the external Communist interest was French. Dienbienphu had fallen and the Vietnamese were victorious. But Russia and China were interested in French defeat of the European Defense Community. To accommodate this purpose, the Vietnamese were induced to delay the normal fruits of victory, and to defer acquisition of territory and people until the "elections" of 1956. These, as we know were never held.

It must be admitted that Ho was a Vietnamese and that he often acted in the national interests of Vietnam. This was certainly true at such times as the purposes of nationalism and Communism coincided.

But the myth of his nationalism has persisted in this country for at least two decades. As early as 1950 Dean Acheson, then Secretary of State complained about the false "illusion" as to the "nationalist" character of Ho's aims. That the impression lingers even after Ho's real death is another remarkable illustration of the American love of illusions and of our devoted if unthinking attachment to modern mythology.

vice chairman Joseph C. Houghteling, publisher, was composed of seven other members.

They included Henry Boswick, Jr., executive vice president and general manager of the San Mateo County Development Association; San Francisco Mayor John F. Shelley; Assemblyman Nicholas C. Petris of Oakland; Louis Els-Hokin, general contractor; Councilman Newell B. Case of Walnut Creek, vice president of the Association of Bay Area Governments; and Eugene L. Friend, San Francisco businessman.

The Commission found that the public had an interest in the Bay as the most valuable resource of an entire region.

It found that the haphazard filling of the Bay:

"May place serious restrictions on navigation in the Bay, may destroy the irreplaceable feeding and breeding grounds of fish and wildlife in the Bay, may adversely affect the quality of Bay waters and even the quality of air in the Bay area."

It recommended the creation of a Bay Conservation and Development Commission consisting of representatives of the federal government, state government, cities and counties in the Bay area and the general public.

This commission, it reported, should make a detailed study of Bay characteristics, should study present and proposed uses of Bay and shoreline, and then prepare a comprehensive plan for conservation and use of the Bay.

During the planning period, it was suggested, the BCDC should protect the present shoreline and water and to do so be empowered to issue or deny permits, after public hearings, for any proposed project that involves placing fill in the Bay or extracting submerged materials.

Finally, this study should lead to the preparation of a comprehensive and enforceable plan for the conservation of the Bay water and shoreline development, it reported.

Substantially, this was what the Legislature did, as it set up BCDC for a trial run. Each county board of supervisors appointed a representative, ABAG appointed three city representatives, the governor appointed several at large representatives, ranging from the State Highway Transportation Agency to the State Lands Commission each got a representative. The Army Corps of Engineers and the Federal Housing and Home Finance Agency also were included.

The first attempt at regional government with at least temporary power created a strong organization which by planning was to work closely with other agencies.

Grants of Bay lands were to cease, unless approved by BCDC, and permit procedure and hearings soon developed real muscle for the new organization.

Its major proposals were:

1. To expand such ports as Redwood City, Benicia, Oakland, Richmond and San Francisco.

2. To deepen major shipping channels to the delta from Golden Gate, and to other port cities.

3. To reserve sufficient acreage for future water-related industry.

4. To provide shoreline parks, beaches, marinas, fishing piers, scenic drives and hiking or bicycle paths, and to offer opportunities for recreational development, particularly in urban areas.

5. To prepare a regional plan for future airport development, and to allow Bay fill only if no feasible alternatives existed.

6. To maintain wildlife refuges in diked-off areas around the Bay.

7. To encourage private investment in shoreline development, particularly water-oriented housing.

To carry out the plan, it was urged that the agency should be a limited regional government.

It was part of the plan that permits for Bay filling and dredging must be reviewed by the agency, and fill controlled by BCDC after hearings.

The plan called for giving limited jurisdiction over development in shoreline areas and listed several reasons for doing so. They are:

1. To insure that prime shoreline sites are reserved for priority uses—ports, water-related industry, airports, wildlife refuges and water-related recreation.

2. To insure that public access to the Bay is provided to the maximum extent feasible. (This is interpreted to include being able to see the Bay.)

3. To insure that if salt ponds are proposed for development, consideration be given to public purchase and return of these areas to the Bay.

4. To insure that shoreline areas not needed for priority use are developed in ways that do not adversely affect the Bay.

5. To encourage attractive design in shoreline development.

The plan specifically stated that "in general, shoreline development should continue to be subject principally to local controls." The Bay agency should administer its shoreline jurisdiction through a permit system, the plan suggested.

Although the language of the Bay plan was conservative, even the placing of permit power in the hands of a regional agency was of concern to a number of citizens; and some members of the board indicated that the permit function had become an absolute, once the plan got a go-ahead.

While the ambitious plan to control the shoreline was limited to a few feet, the next generations of plans which would, in effect, create BCDC's length of California's coastline, talked in terms of permit control over a mile or more back from the water, and of enforcing not only ecological and economic controls over the main coastal waters but also of streams flowing into them.

Today, while there is general agreement on some of the ecological objectives, many mayors, councilmen and just plain citizens are concerned over what may happen when this kind of power is placed in the hands of a group over which there is no local control but only area control.

Humans Most Dangerous

By SAMUEL C. CHANDLER

"The most dangerous animal in the world writes books about some of the most interesting animals in the world." Thus a critic from Columbia University refers to man's newly found interest in his fellow creatures.

Sounding a note of peril, Monica Hutchings and Mavis Carver point out that man's interest in animals comes in the nick of time; for animals help to create the environment that allows men to live, yet men destroy the animals at average rate of 30 million wild creatures every year. Many being slaughtered by hideous cruelty and for no other purpose than to amuse thoughtless human beings.

Miss Hutchings and Miss Carver add a chapter at the end of their book, "Man's Dominion," calling for a worldwide movement to end the general ecological deterioration of the world. "Let this book be read," a reviewer writes "by anyone who thinks that peoples' basic kindness keeps them from mistreating animals."

"Man's Dominion" recalls a 1968 publication, "Ordeal of the Animals," by Mel omrse who is president of the Humane Society of the United States. He writes — "The oppressed are helpless. Animals cannot talk or vote or defend themselves in anyway" — yet "not a single state requires a hunter to identify precisely what he's trying to kill — or how he will kill it."

"The average hunter," Mr. Morse continues, "should be able to distinguish a goose from a swan, a pheasant from a chicken, a deer from a cow, and any form of wildlife from a man — but he can't." Nor can he or his wife realize how pesticides are destroying man's fellow creatures, or how many thousands of animals are destroyed in the name of big business.

Editor, The Post:

I was a member of a "Taxpayers Revolt Group", that attended the round table discussion held in the chambers of the Board of Supervisors July 22.

Many of the complexities of welfare and school taxes as well as property taxes were very competently explained by two men from the governor's office. These men were Mr. Hall and Mr. Bruce Nestaude.

After the meeting several of us, discussed an article that was in the local papers several days ago, with Mr. Nestaude.

It was relative to the State of New York refusing immediate welfare relief to some floaters from California. Instead the New York Welfare Department defied an order of the U.S. Supreme Court and instead of giving these people welfare handouts they gave them return fare to our beloved welfare state.

Mr. Nestaude explained that what happened was that the legislators of the state of New York got behind Governor Rockefeller 100 percent and passed legislation refusing any more free handouts to transients unless they could prove that they were residents of the state of New York for a specified time.

All of the group that heard Mr. Nestaude's explanation concurred.

If the state of New York with the concurrence of its governor and all legislators can get away with refusing welfare to transients and floaters then why cannot California enact similar legislation. We had that legislation before the U.S. Supreme court ruled it illegal. Taxpayers here feel that we should not be forced to supply free welfare to wanderers from all the nation that take a notion to vacation here in California for a few months, then move on elsewhere. We feel that sincere and responsible legislators that really want to help hold down the ever-growing tax increases should immediately pass similar legislation as has the state of New York.

GEORGE R. STANTON, Millbrae.

Editor, The Post:

Environmentalists should be keeping score close to home as well as nationally these days. Locally we came out ahead (sort of) twice and lost one lately.

The meeting between Councilmen Crista and Governale and the Pacifica representatives that resulted in a request to the Highway Department to scale down the 380 monstrosity to four lanes showed that some elected representatives have started to heed the warnings of the conservationists.

July 10th the papers carried an item about a new coastal policy to protect California's coastline from unwarranted highway construction. The new policy will permit only minimal freeway construction along a coastal zone that runs the length of the state. This seems to mean that the govern-ror is tuning in to environmental considerations at last.

But at our last San Bruno Planning Commission meeting we saw a developer bullying the commissioners when they tried to enforce an ordinance to keep the percentage of landscaping high. The result is that we are going to have more asphalt and less landscaping than we were supposed to have in our onetime verdant Tanforan. So speaks the mighty dollar in our town.

These ups and downs mean that we have a long way to go to convince those who are in places of power that the environment we live in needs to be protected with action as well as words.

HAROLD C. GREGORY, San Bruno.

Editor, The Post:

Regarding the new Twenty-sixth Amendment to the Constitution of the United States, "Granting the voting franchise to the young citizens starting at the age of 18." I sincerely believe that this just legislation will place a responsibility on these young individuals by having a voice and vote, and this helps solve governmental problems during the worst inflationary period in our history.

The records prove that the young man under 21 years old, was always the first to enlist to defend our country. Young women at age 18, by law, are free to marry without a parent's written consent. Therefore, it is only fitting and proper that this important segment of our society participate in government and planning their future, including consideration for parents and grandparents.

The two most serious problems of today are, Number One, where are the jobs for the millions in America each year that are ready for employment? The second sad picture is the 65-year-olds on Social Security, some with an additional small pension, who unfortunately cannot live a normal life due to rising prices and higher taxes. What can our government do for these respected citizens of yesterday? Now comes the decision for the young voters to make.

On Question One, will they support legislation that will encourage elders to retire before age 65 with a life guarantee that further inflation will not effect the pensioners? This is one way to solve our bad employment problem.

On Question Two, I feel it is unjust for any home owner at age 65 to continue to pay any type of school taxes, which incidentally, is the bulk of current taxes.

During my 20 years as a Daly City councilman, it was a pleasant privilege to work on Youth in Government programs. Now these same graduates will have their opportunity under the Twenty-sixth Amendment to make our country a better place to live, work and play. The United States Constitution is still the greatest document ever created for a democracy.

EDWARD J. DENNIS, Daly City.

Upset Over the Ungrateful

Paid out at least annual visit to Walter Mails, recently, and found him upset over ungrateful people.

As we have suggested, in this space on more than one occasion, the Giants have one of the most generous plans in the majors for letting kids into the stadium gratis. This year, however, because of the alterations being made by the city on the park, the city asked the Giants to suspend the kids' program for this year only. Because most of the construction is being concentrated on the upper tiers, where the kids concentrate, the city felt it could get its work done more efficiently, and with less potential hazard to the children, if the children simply weren't there.

But many parents and heads of kids' groups don't believe that explanation, says Walter. They're accusing the Giants of shutting the kids out because of their sudden success.

Said one lady, "Oh, you guys loved the kids when the Giants were down and couldn't get anybody in the stadium and used the kids to make it look like you were doing some business, but now that you guys can sell those seats, you're dropping the kids like hot potatoes."

"Not true, ridiculous," says Mails. And Walter is telling the absolute truth, you ungrateful people.

OTHER QUOTABLE QUOTES FROM WALTER MAILS: "There's more talent around than ever before, and fewer prospects."

"The young people are coming back to Candlestick, the kids are coming back to baseball."

"The three worst hitters who ever lived were Ron Herbel, Steve Stone and Walter Mails."

"Last year, I thought Tito Fuentes was just about the worst major league baseball player I had ever seen. This year I've changed my mind. I'm not sure I've ever seen a player improve so much in just one year."

"Chris Speier is the best looking young shortstop I've seen in years — maybe than I've ever seen. And I don't mean just defensively. He's gonna be a helluva hitter, too."

"In fact, the only better one I've ever seen defensively at any age was Glenn Wright back in the '20s and '30s. (Note: Wright also had a .294 lifetime batting average.) When he played for Pittsburgh and had Pie Traynor playing third base alongside him, it was almost impossible to hit a ball between them on that side of the infield."

"But now I'll tell you, Speier might not ever be better than Roy Niece, who played shortstop for the Seals in the 40s. Of course, it's hard to tell because of this Astroturf, but I'm sure Chris is quicker, has more range. But Niece had the greatest hands in the world, and nobody, but nobody, ever had a better arm that Roy, could gun a man out from that hole the way he could."

FOR YEARS we've been trying to fathom the reason for the total lack of left-handed catchers in baseball. Second basemen, we can understand (How would a lefty make a doubleplay pivot?). Third basemen we can understand (What could a lefty do with a bunt?). Shortstop we can understand, possibly until there are more left-handed batters than right-handed batters, when a southpaw shortstop would then have the advantage on those hits up the middle, because he wouldn't have to throw across his body. The problem of the throw from the hole then wouldn't be as valid an excuse for right-handed shortstops, because there wouldn't be as many balls hit into the hole.

But what disadvantage does a left-handed catcher have? The only one we've been able to get from baseball men is that there are more right-handed hitters, and that they serve as at least psychological obstructions on throws to second and third. But again, in this age of switch-hitters, there is not nearly the preponderance of right-handed hitters as there once was.

The only actual, practical disadvantage to being a left handed catching aspirant that we've been able to determine is simply that sporting goods companies don't make left-handed catchers gloves — or, at least, make so few of them that it requires a virtual act of Congress to purchase one. You can see how a southpaw who wants to learn to be a catcher might get discouraged.

If we were of a mood to start a movement, this is where we would go. Sporting goods companies are definitely displaying flagrant prejudice against left-handed catchers. We don't know if it's because they believe the unreasonable myth that a catcher can't be a lefty, or if, for some warped reason, they long ago decided that it is unfashionable to be a southpaw receiver. What ever the reason, anyone for a Left-Hander's Lib?

BING CROSBY was, at a recent Pirate game sitting in a box seat behind home plate under the "KSFO" sign, being completely ignored by fellow fans, who either didn't recognize him, or were more interested in the Giants. And from what we know of Crosby, not only were his feelings unscathed, he was happy about the anonymity. That, we understand, is one of the reasons he settled in the Bay Area. People here, apparently, are too blasé to be awed by super stars.

For the same reasons, Joe Dimaggio returned home rather than settling in New York after his playing days, where he could have made a lot of fringe money, but would undoubtedly have also been driven out of his gourd by eastern hero-worshippers. Here, Joe is just one of the boys.

We are acquainted with the barber who cuts Joe's hair down on the Wharf, and also a couple of other customers who have been in the shop when Joe wandered by for a trim. We don't have one report of anybody every having asked Joe for an autograph or attempted to engage him in baseball conversation. Either customers don't recognize him, which seems unlikely, or they merely respect the shy guy's wish to have a haircut unimpeded by the need to perform.

A WIRE SERVICE baseball writer was heard to exclaim in the Candlestick pressbox the other day, "The Angels are still loaded with flakes, even with Johnson (Alex) and Conigliaro (Tony) gone. There's talk about firing Lefty (manager Phillips). Hell, they should give him a medal."

The wire service man was absolutely right. The Angels started the season rated as good dark horse favorites to unseat Minnesota and put down the rise of the A's. They had made some apparently brilliant winter trades, including some dealing that brought them two-thirds of a new outfield, forming possibly one of the best in the American League.

In left was the league's leading hitter, Alex Johnson; in center Ken Berry, who many claim has taken Willie Mays' place as baseball's premier defensive center fielder, and who had his best hitting year the previous season with the White Sox (276; in right, one of the best power hitters in the league, Tony Conigliaro).

You know what happened. The entire Angel outfield is now wiped out. Johnson and Conigliaro are no longer with the club, and Berry suddenly became a worse hitter than he ever was (averaging .200) and had to be removed when Phillips, sans Johnson and Conigliaro, could no longer afford the luxury of only defense in center. To top things off, the key Angel of them all, shortstop Jim Fregosi, considered by many the best in baseball, developed a tumor on his right foot and had to undergo surgery.

Still, Phillips has managed to keep the Angels in third place, ahead of Minnesota. Granted, Bill Rigney has had his share of tough breaks. His three best hitters, Tony Oliva, Harmon Killebrew and Rod Carew, have all missed many games or been ineffective because of injuries.

But dealing with weird personalities and subsequent morale problems can be a much trickier managerial feat than shifting bodies to plug up holes left by injury, and merely surviving in such a situation, let alone keeping a team in third place is, as the wire service writer said, worthy of a medal.

TAG ENDS: If Monty Malaprop over at Oakland says once more that Tommy Davis will be able to hit wher, he's in a rocking chair, the heavy connotation being that Davis is ancient, we're going to write Monty a nasty letter. Davis turned 32 just a few months ago . . . It's ironic that Baltimore, probably the best team in baseball, has — at this writing, at least — the shortest divisional lead . . . Last time we looked, Oakland's leading hitter was pitcher Catfish Hunter . . . And lowly Milwaukee not only has the third best team earned run average in the Biggies, but has tossed more shutouts at opponents than any team around.

PENSIVE MOODS — With their pet lambs nestled close, these young 4-H'ers wait their turn on the auction block. Lambs from the grand champion on down were sold to the highest bidder. For some youths who raised the animal for so long the auction was the saddest part of the San Mateo County Fair. (Post Photo)

SSF Canoe Class Opens

The South San Francisco Recreation and Park Department, in conjunction with the American Red Cross, will begin a certified canoeing course at Oyster Point Marina.

Emphasis will be on safety, basic stroke technique and enjoyment. All students must be able to demonstrate swimming competency in deep water as a class prerequisite. Scout groups are encouraged to register.

Registration will be held Thursday at South San Francisco Municipal Swim Pool from 10 a.m. to noon for residents, and from noon to 1 p.m. for open registration. There is a five dollar fee for residents and a six dollar fee for non-residents. The fee includes the purchase of a canoeing book.

Pacifica Warns Young Cyclists

Young motorcyclists in Pacifica driving without a valid license will be cited by police, according to Nathaniel Marks, chairman of the Pacifica Health and Safety Commission.

"We have heard several complaints against these youngsters not old enough to have driver licenses riding motor bikes on the streets. That alone is reason for citation," said Marks.

"What's more, they endanger their own lives, and the lives of pedestrians and auto drivers by violating rules of the road. They cross streets against stop signs and red lights, ride against the direction of traffic, fail to keep to the right side of the roadway and generally act in a childish, senseless manner."

Bicycle riders observed violating traffic rules also will be cited, Marks said.

He warned that parents of minibike riders keep their chil-

Cali Worries County Duo

CALI, Colombia — All was not sweetness and light here for the opening of the VI Pan American Games last Thursday. The city of one million was busy and the American team was chafing under rules restrictions.

And on top of that, the Peninsula's two representatives at the Games have problems of their own.

San Mateo swimmer Tom McBreen, America's top representative in the 1500-meter, can't be fully competitive here because he has another meet on his mind.

Marilyn King, the U.S. women's pentathlon champ who represents the Millbrae Lions Track Club, isn't overly worried about any games except next year's Olympiad — but that is worry enough.

McBreen's whole summer of training with Tom Holman's Golden Gate Aquatic Club is pointed toward next month's AAU national championships. A gold medal at Cali cuts no ice at the Nationals.

Winners at the Nationals will make up a U.S. team that will tour Russia, which McBreen wants very much to do. So Cali must take second place, and McBreen will continue to train for the nationals.

Miss King proved last month that she is the best U.S. has to offer in the women's pentathlon, and Millbrae's coach Ed Parker was pleased about her selection for Cali.

Marilyn has improved tremendously with the Lions after moving to California from Hawaii. But to be a winner in Munich she must improve still more, and that will always be at the back of her mind.

The first track and field gold medal winner is expected to be Wisconsin's sensational high jumper, Pat Matzdorf, who smashed the world record with a leap of 7-6½ at Berkeley July 3. The high jump and the 10,000 meter finals both are scheduled Saturday night.

Saturday's qualifications also will display 20-year-old John Davis, world record holder in the 400-meter run, and Marty Liquori in the 1500 meter. The third U.S. world record holder, hurdler Rod Milburn, goes into action Monday.

Arthur G. Lentz, U.S. Olympic

Committee Executive Director, thinks that the U.S. Pan-American team is a good one.

"For the first time in three Pan Am games, we will have a true Olympic nucleus and not a track squad we had to beg or persuade to organize," he said.

"It is significant that our track squad includes 19 of the 22 champions in the recent national AAU meet which served as the Pan Am trials.

Regal Selects Cinch Lead

The Eastern Division Regal Selects have taken over sole possession of first place in the Daly City Recreational Division High School Slow Pitch Softball League.

They did it by defeating the Westlake School Mustangs by a score of 3 to 2.

Peter Diaz was the big hitter for the Selects and Tom McLaughlin was a standout for the Mustangs.

The Southern Hills Brewers jumped into the win column by downing the Westlake Park Mangers 6-4. Chinto Fonseca, Dave Ginilo, and Brian Gavigan aided the Brewers cause.

The Mustangs rebounded to down the Lincoln Park Allstars by a score of 9-1. Mark Racetti, George McLaughlin, and Lou Hudson were outstanding for the Mustangs.

Peter Diaz once again led the Regal Selects to a victory by slugging a bases loaded triple as the Selects downed the Westlake Park Mangers by a score of 7-1.

The annual Frisbee contest results are Nancy Nolan, 1st place, 12-15 girls; Steve Nolan, 1st place, 12-15 boys; Tom Murphy 1st place, 11 and under boys; Kathy Murphy, 1st place, 11 and under girls.

SSF Registrants Dive In

Registration for Synchronized Swimming and Basic Spring Board Diving was held last week at South San Francisco Municipal Swimming Pool.

The South San Francisco Recreation and Park Department held registration at the pool for both residents and non-residents. The fee for each course is $3.50. Non-residents are subject to an additional charge of $1.

Synchronized Swimming offers the students a chance to develop stroke coordination and grace in the water. The course will develop the basic skills of synchronized swimming and may be the ground work for a South San Francisco Synchronized Team.

Basic Spring Board Diving is devoted to the promotion of safe diving through the learning of basic diving skills. Diving Instructor Frank Johnson said there is a marked improvement in diving skill level of students enrolled.

The summer time fitness program for ladies offers an opportunity to stay fit. The instruction is offered 9:30 to 11 a.m. Monday and Wednesday for 50¢ per workout.

THE WATER'S FINE — Students in the South San Francisco Synchronized Swimming and Basic Spring Board Diving classes get a workout at the South San Francisco Orange Memorial Park Pool.

Sports

Both young men are eligible to represent Daly City at the District Competition to be held in San Francisco this month.

The extensive dance program for children, sponsored by the Daly City Recreation Department, will present one of the featured end-of-the-summer programs on August 18 at the War Memorial Community Center at 7:30 p.m.

Students will present an array of ballet, tap, jazz, and creative dance numbers.

The Daly City Players, sponsored by the Daly City Recreation Division, will present "Fanny, The Frivolous Flapper" at the Serramonte High School Little Theatre on August 19, 20, 21, 26, 27 and 28 at 8 p.m.

Cast members will sing and dance their way through the Roarin' 20's musical comedy. "Flapper" stars will include Roseanne Regal, Yvonne Sanchez, Sandy McDonald, Al Bauer, and Gina Zito.

Tickets may be purchased from cast members, the Daly City Recreation Division, or at the door for each performance.

BRIGHT LIGHTS BY LLOYD JOHNSON

Helen Trainer Returns To Scotty Campbell's

Welcome home to everyone's darling at Scotty Campbell's . . . and we mean Helen Trainer, the mother of Mary Lou Francis and Theresa Urban, who co-own this award-winning Redwood City restaurant. Helen is back at her greeting post after an extended stay at their Wisconsin resort, where she oversees the gift shop and makes guests feel right at home. The tremendous volume of thirty and hungry hordes that keep Scotty Campbell's humming is ably handled by the teamwork of an efficient staff directed by this feminine trio and Theresa's husband, Bud . . . The cocktail lounge at Vince's Italian and Sea Foods restaurant is a well-appointed haven for before and after dinner libations. Many local business people from nearby offices gather here during the evening cocktail hours to unwind after a busy day. Daily luncheon specials (Monday through Friday) are also big attractions here. All varieties of fresh fish (when available) are served, and an unlimited menu of favorite Italian dishes . . . Dessert treat: Try the thick English Toffee ice cream at Atherton's Lord Fletcher Inn. An excellent British dinner followed by either of these desserts makes for an unbeatable meal.

ADRIAN "RED" STICKNEY is the diligent gentleman responsible for creating the vast Stickney's restaurant empire. "Red" started years ago with one restaurant, the original Hickory House in Redwood City. Now he has several locations, and is considered one of the foremost restaurant owners in the state.

Appealing Luncheon And Dinner Served—Oreste's

Oreste's, owned and managed by the master chef, Joe Piccini, has long been one of San Francisco's landmarks of good food. Italian food, prepared in the Tuscan manner, is the specialty. Luncheons are also served, and the intimacy of the cocktail lounge is very relaxing. A variety of banquet rooms, with private bar, are available for special party functions . . . Dorothy Pace, co-owner of the fashionable Red Cottage in Menlo Park, is vacationing at her townhouse in Lake Tahoe with her new husband, Wayne Smith. A bride of almost three months, Dorothy is due back on the Peninsula within the next couple of weeks . . . Congratulations are due Dave Rasmussen, owner of The Shadows of San Mateo, Oregon rancher and a local auto dealer. He is now the proud owner of a new VW dealership. The Rasmussen name is already on the license plates of thousands of Peninsula VW's, and his new Concar Drive outlet insures continued success.

Helen Botelho At The Piano

Helen Botelho, who celebrates her twenty-second year as pianist at Finocchio's, has been the leader of the group, which plays some great accompaniments for the productions, for the past 15 years. Through the years, Helen has had some of the country's top musicians in her orchestra, including Dave Black, a virtuoso on the drums, and Eddie Gorman on the saxophone. Helen has come to know many of the greats of the entertainment world, as they pass through the portals of this famous San Francisco spot . . . Carolyn Stoner Week in Belmont honored that city's newly chosen Miss California, and one of the many events scheduled was an elegant reception at the Holiday Inn, Belmont. The reception was attended by most of the Belmont City officials, the lovely hometown beauty, and many of the beauty queen's friends . . . Enrico Romano, owner of Romano's Italian restaurant in Pacifica's Rockaway Beach, is a racing enthusiast as well as a fine hunter, who spends many weeks every year in pursuit of this exciting sport . . . Phil Lehr's Steakery, in downtown San Francisco, is a celebrity-watcher's paradise. Among show-biz superstars seen dining here recently: Shelley Winters and Jack Benny.

Leaning Tower Fish Stories

There is a continuing fish story at The Leaning Tower restaurant, in South San Francisco. Plankmen Russ Conroy and Matt Cason, skilled at the sport of fishing, fancy themselves as salmon experts. Matt has a 32-pounder to his credit, while Russ has only a 28-pounder. Sound like a "fish story"? . . . Belmont's Black Stag manager, Arnie Ramirez, is still stressing modestly priced dinners. For example, a spaghetti dinner is only $2.85; a plate of ravioli is $3. There are higher priced entrees, of course, but most remain in the $3.75 to $4.25 range . . . The Hilton Inn's Mark Twain Lounge gives you more fun for less money with its new cocktail hour rates from 5 p.m. to 7 p.m. Along with excellent drinks you will also enjoy singer-guitarist Anne Reed's exciting act . . . Don Dianda is very happy that Doros was named by Holiday Magazine as tops for dining in San Francisco for the tenth consecutive year. Very few restaurants are so honored . . . Don Sherwood, one of the world's greatest disc jockeys, continues to frequent The Greek Taverna in North Beach, savoring the sensuous belly dancers, signing autographs and chattering with the Haramis Brothers, who operate this unique Greek restaurant night club.

BRIGHT LIGHTS

Orrin Tucker Orchestra Harvey's Resort Hotel

Orrin Tucker, one of the biggest names in the band business, entertains the patrons at the Top of the Wheel Tiki Lounge, Harvey's Resort Hotel, South Lake Tahoe, with danceable rhythms, through September 2. The "Oh Johnny" record with the squeaky voiced Wee Bonnie Baker (Columbia Records) really started the Orrin Tucker orchestra off to a fantastic beginning. It sold over a million — Alternating with Tucker is Ron Rose and Friend . . . Park Avenue Tours has a two-night package to Reno that gives a refund of over $37 per person. This is a drive-up package, and the refund includes cash, food, cocktails, chips and Keno tickets. For further information, see your nearest Park Avenue Tours office . . . Sid Yanoff, a well-known figure in San Francisco night life circles, is now associated with Lew Lehr's Steak House, in San Francisco Marina district. Sid's friendliness and easy-going manner fit hand in glove with Lehr's tradition of gracious service.

Variation of Menus At Nick's

Those who enjoy very good Mexican food at modest prices in an atmosphere that reminds one of a trip to "Olay" land should hasten to Nick Gust's Papagayo Room at Rockaway Beach, Pacifica. The tantalizing aromas of enchiladas, frijoles and burritos permeate the colorful cantina-restaurant. By popular demand, the "2 for the price of 1" coupon special here has been extended through August 29. Valid Wednesdays through Sundays (all holidays excluded), the coupon will give you and your guest the choice of a Steak Picado or large combination Plate, and the least expensive dinner is free. This, plus a panoramic view of the rolling surf from window-side tables, puts the Papagayo Room on your "must" list . . . For cuisine with a Continental flair served in ultra-smart surroundings, The Moonraker, another successful Gust restaurant enterprise, is located on the second level of the same oceanside building. The theme is nautical and accented with ship's wheels, lanterns, pilings and nets . . . Across the street you will find Nick's restaurant (the daddy of 'em all), where early-rising breakfasters stow away hearty meals guaranteed to carry them through a walk along the beach. Then there are luncheon and dinner menus affording several choices of selections. There is also dinner-dancing for those who find the urge.

Irifune For Japanese Food

The charming hostess at the Irifune Japanese restaurant is Toshi. Kiyohara, wife of owner Toshio, who is in the kitchen providing the culinary artistry. Kimono clad, the pretty Toshi greets diners, sees them to a table, then (if requested) explains the various Japanese dishes. Dining here is a fine experience . . . Ted Downes, general manager of The Rowdway Inn, South San Francisco, has inked The Crystal Set to entertain in the Golden Rooster Lounge nightly, Tuesday through Saturday, from 9 p.m. The group, from the San Diego area, will be on the Rowdway's marquee for an extensive engagement . . . The menu at A. Sabella's at Fisherman's Wharf offers an impressive election of seafood dishes, as well as savory Italian dishes. If you are a salad fancier, try Lucien Sabella's Special Pirate salad (crab, shrimp, prawns, lobster on shredded lettuce, served with 1000 Island dressing), or Avocado Stuffed with Crab or Shrimp. The seafoods are helpfully grouped under general and classified headings. Portions are generous and you may order a la carte or a dinner.

Frank Fabbro Set For 49ers

The 49ers' first game of the year was played Sunday at Candlestick Park, and you can bet that restaurateur Frank Fabbro was on hand to help cheer the downfall of the Browns. Frank feels that the local pros are destined for the Super Bowl this year, and it's most unlikely that he'll be absent from even one home game . . . The Band Stand has an unusual attraction every Wednesday night. It's a free spaghetti feed. This, plus draft beer, live entertainment and dancing, is certain to pave the way for a fun-filled evening . . . King's Table, an "All you can eat" smorgasbord in Redwood City, now features steaks or prime rib on the dinner buffet Monday through Wednesday evenings. You'll also find numerous salads, hot dishes and desserts on the sumptuous buffet — all for the price of $2.10 . . . Claude Schroeder, Food and Beverage Manager at the Rapp Brothers' Holiday Inn, South San Francisco, is one of the snappiest dressers on the local hotel and restaurant scene. The immaculately attired manager displays a dazzling array of sport jackets all through the summer months.

Danish Fare for Picnic

For a Danish-style picnic, surprise everyone with open-face sandwiches. The Danes call them smørrebrød. They're lower in calories because you use only half as much bread. Fix them in convenient bite-size portions in a wide assortment of combinations.

You can do a lot beforehand. Spread sliced light, dark and/or pumpernickel bread with butter. Then cover with sliced ham, corned beef, luncheon meat, sandwich loaf, deviled ham, salami, pate or cheese. DAK Foods, Inc., a United States importer of canned meats and cheese from Denmark, reports toppings and garnishes can travel separately and the sandwiches assembled just before serving.

Try any or all of these on top of sandwiches made with sliced ham, luncheon meat or sandwich loaf: mustard-flavored coleslaw, baked beans, sliced tomato and hard-cooked egg with mayonnaise, cranberry relish, cheese salad dressing capped with thinly-sliced radishes, green pepper and onion rings, a spiral of soft cream cheese seasoned with prepared mustard or horseradish, deviled egg salad, chive or pimiento cream cheese, chili sauce.

Top sliced corned beef sandwiches with sliced tomato and caraway coleslaw with finely diced potato salad, fragrant with celery seed and mustard seed; sauerkraut, chopped green pepper and horseradish, minced onion and pickle.

Dress up pate sandwiches with crisp bacon and butter-fried mushroom slices.

Make salami sandwiches special with cream cheese, Havarti cheese and prepared mustard, sliced pickles, finely chopped raw onion, sliced stuffed olives.

To deviled ham sandwiches add chopped pickle and mustard, sliced cheese, horseradish, chopped onion, radishes, sour cream, cream cheese sprinkled with chopped nuts, egg salad.

On the side, add chopped ham to potato salad, macaroni salad, mixed bean salad, mixed vegetable salad, or baked beans. Garnish tossed green salad with chopped ham, strips of salami, or cubes of cheese, or all three.

For dessert, serve the Havarti, Samsoe and Munster cheeses with fresh fruits.

Chicken and Fruit Salad

This unique salad recipe combines dried apricots, grapes, cubed chicken and fresh Bartlett pears in an oil and vinegar dressing. Chill it well before serving, and, to make a quick meal, serve it with grilled cheese sandwiches.

If your family likes it, you may wish to include "Pear-Apricot-Chicken-Salad" at the next buffet party when you offer guests an assortment of sidedish salads.

PEAR-APRICOT-CHICKEN SALAD

1/2 cup dried apricots, cut up
2 tablespoons vinegar
1/4 cup water
1/4 cup salad oil
2 cups cubed cooked chicken
1 cup Thompson seedless grapes
2 fresh California Bartlett pears

Combine apricots, vinegar and water in saucepan; bring to boil and simmer for 5 minutes. Stir in salad oil and combine with chicken and grapes. Halve, core and cube pears; add to salad. Chill well before serving. Makes four servings.

Old Standby for Dessert

This simple homemade dessert is a new version of an old favorite which may have become just a little too ripe for eating out-of-hand. Don't bother to peel the nectarines. Their skins are thin and fuzz-free—actually enhance the flavor of the dish.

NECTARINE BETTY

1 quart sliced fresh nectarines
1/2 cup brown sugar (packed)
1/4 cup margarine or butter
1 quart day-old bread cubes
1/4 cup granulated sugar
1/4 teaspoon cinnamon
Combine nectarines and brown sugar in 1 1/2-quart baking dish. Melt margarine in large saucepan; mix in bread cubes, granulated sugar and cinnamon until coated. Sprinkle over fruit. Bake in pre-heated 350-degree oven for 25 minutes or until hot all the way through. Makes six servings.

Classic French Dessert

Many a French classic dessert looks handsome and translates beautifully for the American table. Classic Diplomat French Trifle, for instance, is a rousing finale to a company meal - or for serving in the evening with a bottle of fine wine.

While the trifle looks elaborate, it is easier to make than one would believe and the recipe could be tackled successfully even by a novice cook.

Begin by lining a charlotte mold with French sponge fingers soaked in orange juice and kirsch, a cherry brandy. Alternate layers of the remaining sponge fingers with layers of sugared strawberries to fill the mold and chill.

Invert the mold on a platter, and spread with Bar-le-Duc red-currant preserve from the Lorraine region of France. Serve with chilled custard sauce. If you choose, garnish with rosettes of whipped cream, and candied violets.

Dessert wine with the trifle, for instance, Rose d'Anjou, is perfection. It's a light, melon dessert wine from the Loire valley.

DIPLOMAT FRENCH TRIFLE

(Makes about 6 servings)

- 3/4 pound French sponge fingers
- 1-3 cup French Kirsch
- 1/4 cup orange juice
- 1 quart strawberries, hulled and sliced or 10 large blue plums, pitted and diced
- 1-3 cup sugar

- Custard:
- 1-3 cup sugar
 - 5 egg yolks
 - 2 cups milk
 - 2 teaspoons vanilla
 - 2 jars (3 ounces each) Bar-le-Duc red-currant preserve

Sprinkle sponge fingers with Kirsch mixed with orange juice. Use fingers to line the bottom and sides of a 1-quart charlotte mold. Mix fruit and sugar. Layer fruit and sponge fingers, ending with the sponge fingers. Press tightly, cover with foil. Place a plate on top of mold and top with a heavy weight. Chill for several hours.

To prepare custard: mix sugar and egg yolks. Gradually beat in milk. Cook over low heat, stirring constantly until mixture thickens slightly and coats the spoon. Cool; stir in vanilla, and chill. When ready to serve trifle, invert mold on a platter. Spread Bar-le-Duc thickly over the top and sides of the mold. Serve with icy cold custard sauce. Garnish with crystallized violets.

Entree From the Orient

Similar in essence to the Spanish Paella Valenciana, this hearty chicken-seafood-rice dish hails from the Far Eastern country of Indonesia.

Indonesian Chicken with Seafood uses peanut products which, along with peanuts, are being spotlighted by the United States Department of Agriculture's Consumer and Marketing Service as the plentiful foods-to-feature.

INDONESIAN CHICKEN WITH SEAFOOD

- 1 1/2-pound fryer chicken or fryer parts
- Water
- 1 medium onion, quartered
- 1 bay leaf
- 1 teaspoon salt
- 1/4 teaspoon peanut oil
- 3/4 cup chopped onion
- 1 clove garlic, minced
- 2 tablespoons peanut butter
- 1/2 teaspoon salt
- 1/2 teaspoon ground cumin
- 1 teaspoon ground coriander
- 1/4 teaspoon ground red pepper
- 2 cups chicken stock
- 1 cup cooked shrimp
- 1/2 cup cooked crab meat
- 1/2 cup cooked ham, diced
- 3/4 cup uncooked rice

Put chicken in pot, over with water. Add quartered onion, bay leaf, and salt. Cover and cook chicken until tender, about 1-1 1/2 hours. Remove chicken from stock. Remove meat from bone and cut it into strips; chill. Strain and reserve stock; chill. This may be done in advance.

About an hour before serving, heat peanut oil in large saucepan. Add onion and garlic, and cook until tender and slightly browned. Stir in peanut butter and seasonings. Add chicken stock and bring mixture to a boil. Stir in chicken, shrimp, crab meat, ham and rice; cover. Simmer about 15 minutes or until rice is tender and fluffy. Season with salt and pepper to taste. Serve at once. Makes six servings.

Police Tell How to Foil Burglars

By FRANK LAPIERRE

There are few professional burglars operating around the county these days. The days of class crooks like TV's ("To Catch a Thief") Robert Wagner, who can open any safe merely by tickling the dial, are gone.

Nowadays most burglaries are sloppy affairs.

The meteoric rise in burglary cases in recent years is attributed to today's drug problems among youth, most San Mateo County police officers feel.

With some 75 per cent of all burglaries in the county committed by amateur burglars under 21 years old, police surmise these crimes are being carried out to purchase drugs.

The type of household items being stolen tend to support this theory.

Today's burglars are nothing more than "housebreakers."

Their methods of entry prove this point.

They seek out unlocked doors and windows. Failing in this, today's unsophisticated burglar hacks a hole in the door, forces open a window with a pry bar or simply smashes out a pane of glass.

Professional thieves would never employ such methods. Another means of entry among today's brazen burglar is to snap off a door handle using a large pipe wrench. Handy burglars employ a credit card to slip between the door and jamb to push back the catch.

For obvious reasons law enforcement circles would prefer a complete do-it-yourself plan not be published. As one officer put it, "We would prefer not helping them down the path of crime."

In Daly City, one of the few cities in the county that witnessed a decline in burglary crimes this year, there were few reported incidents of burglars entering homes as a result of unlocked doors or windows.

"A good lock will slow down a burglar, but it won't stop them," Daly City Police Detective Art Glass said.

Glass has been a police officer for more than eight years. He spends his duty days, and sometimes his nights, on the burglary detail or in court as an expert witness in burglary cases.

He, too, believes most burglaries are being committed by youths.

Between January 1 and July 14 of this year, Daly City investigated 361 residential and commercial burglaries, better than two per day. Since summer vacation started incidents have declined.

Last year, between June 3 and September 2, a dramatic drop in burglaries was noted.

This is considered by police to be the summer vacation period when youths go away to camp or are out of town with their families.

In calendar year 1970, Daly City — with a population of about 70,000 — recorded 721 residential burglaries — an average of two per day.

Officer Glass also feels that there are fewer residential burglaries during the summer period because persons leaving town check security closer — they make sure doors and windows are locked, notify neighbors and inform police.

"At least this is what they are supposed to do," Glass advises.

It was once thought the bulk of residential burglaries were committed in the dark of night.

Not true!

The danger time according to police records is between the hours of 8:30 a.m. and 3:30 p.m. In an effort to combat daytime burglaries, police in many cities have made available checklists urging people to report suspicious cars or persons in their neighborhood.

But the public remains apathetic to pleas for help in this field, police admit.

There have been cases where persons have later come forward and admitted they watched while burglars carted television sets, radios, and even refrigerators out of homes into waiting trucks.

Without public participation police hold little hope of stemming the rising tide of residential burglaries.

One system has been used in Daly City with some measure of success.

Police call it the "saturation patrol."

During peak crime hours police patrols swarm through those neighborhoods that appear to be more attractive to so-called "crimes of advantage."

Officer Glass feels that burglars are indeed "crimes of advantage."

If would be burglars see a patrol car frequently cruising past they will undoubtedly postpone plans, Daly City Police Capt. Richard Sims explains.

Sought-after objects by today's burglars include television sets, radio equipment, guns and small household appliances —

items that can be disposed of for a fast buck.

While guns are hard to dispose of, pawnbrokers are not required to check out whether other items, such as TV sets, are "hot."

Most stolen guns later turn up in the underworld, police say.

In June, 1971, about $9,000 worth of small items were stolen in noncommercial burglaries in Daly City.

Less than $700 worth have been recovered.

Records indicate less than ten per cent of all stolen items are ever recovered.

What does this do to insurance rates, insurance agent Peter J. Markovich was asked?

"Some insurance companies will no longer take burglary and robbery coverage any more," Markovich answered.

Effective Aug. 1, 1971, a number of insurance companies throughout the nation raised their policy premiums about 25 per cent on homeowners policies which include burglaries.

Markovich said some companies have lessened the blow to policyholders by holding the raise at ten per cent.

But the increases are clear proof burglaries are hitting the insurance industry hard.

Markovich, an independent agent, said he processes between three and five burglary claims each month.

"We must solve the cause, namely the drug problem. With this problem solved I believe we will be able to substantially cut down on the crime rate," Glass said.

Glass warned persons happening onto a burglary in progress to protect themselves at all costs.

"Don't put yourself in jeopardy. Citizens have been critically injured trying to stop a burglar," Glass said.

Law enforcement agencies agree that dogs discourage prowlers. Their barking draws attention.

"We will never completely eliminate these crimes," Glass said. "But with the public's cooperation we can cut the figures back."

SSF Council Creates Unit for Finances

Formation of a computerized finance division was approved as part of the adoption of a $6 million budget Saturday by South San Francisco councilmen.

To create the finance division City Mgr. Gale Dreisbach simply separated the financially oriented aspects of the city clerk's office into an independent unit under his control.

"The city manager handles the budget, yet the finance department is not under the control of that office. It's a strange situation," said Dreisbach.

He said he intends eventually to go to payroll automation by contracting for services through a bank.

Computerization of the entire finance division appears to be the ultimate goal. Modern new innovative techniques must be instituted," said Dreisbach. Conversion is expected to take about a year.

City Clerk Arthur Rodondi, whose department will be reduced by almost 50 per cent, said the change would not lessen his interest in his job or the city. "I realize we are in the electronics age," said Rodondi. "I don't want to hold back the progress of this city."

Dreisbach received approval on several other requests he said are geared to streamlining and making more efficient city hall operations.

Among these were authorization to hire a city manager interne and an administrative assistant. As a further backup to the city manager's office, the council approved a central services council clerk position, utilizing a recent employee.

This person will serve mainly as a girl Friday.

Dreisbach said the administrative assistant would handle all the purchasing for the city. He also would represent the city staff on the personnel board, which Dreisbach said is now forced to do duties "not properly theirs."

The city manager intern will be responsible for putting together a monthly newsletter to all the residents of the city.

Dreisbach said the intern, who is hired on a yearly basis, also will have the job of doing research for the city manager and acting as a budget management coordinator. "I demand a great deal (from the staff) and it's perfection," said Dreisbach.

In essence what Dreisbach is doing is setting up three divisions within the city manager's office. They will be administrative, purchasing and personnel. The purpose is efficiency.

Councilman Frank Mammini warned Dreisbach he had better be prepared to take some heat because of the additional personnel, especially since other departments had requests for personnel scratched out by Dreisbach.

Councilmen also granted a new position of deputy city attorney. The consensus was unanimous that Dreisbach did not need to do a selling job to get council approval for someone to help City Atty. John Noonan.

According to Dreisbach, the new deputy city attorney will do the majority of Noonan's research and hopefully would spend a lot of time representing the city in court on various cases.

The elective position of city treasurer also is in for some upgrading salarywise. Councilmen instructed Dreisbach to investigate the requirements of granting an increase.

It was recommended by Dreisbach that the city treasurer's salary of $4,500 annually be increased to $7,780.

South San Francisco is yet to settle with employees on salaries and fringe benefits. Dreisbach, however, said regardless of what the negotiations result in, the city has funds to cover it.

Broadmoor Annex Bid

Officials of the Broadmoor Police Protection District have been asked to report to the County Board of Supervisors next Tuesday on what progress, if any, has been made toward annexing the district to Daly City.

A proposal to advance $60,000 in county funds to the district so it can pay its bills until taxes start coming in has been delayed by the board until then.

The board last year agreed to support special legislation giving the financially strapped district some extra tax revenue on condition that annexation talks be started. The bill increased the maximum tax rate for the district from 3/4 of 1 cent per $100 of assessed valuation to a full 1 per cent, for the 1971-72 fiscal year only.

Mayor Bernard J. Lycett of Daly City told the county board that it became apparent at the second meeting on annexation, held July 27, that the talks were getting nowhere.

"As the conversation continued," Lycett said, "it became evident that we were not talking about the same thing. In fact... the discussion by them was that it was the decision of their people to remain as they were."

Broadmoor Police Chief Ray Savage said today that the residents met with Daly City officials in good faith but told them, in response to a question, that they doubted that the voters of the district would approve annexation at this time.

Landing Rules to Cut Noise

New "visual approach" procedures for jetplanes landing at San Francisco International Airport from the east have been activated by the airport's Sound Abatement Committee.

Chairman W. E. Nawell, a Western Airlines captain, said the new procedures will be announced to all airline pilots by being published in the charts they use for making airport approaches.

As outlined to the Sound Abatement Committee, pilots of large jets making visual approaches to Runway 28, Right or Left, will be requested to remain over the Bay, north and east of Foster City, until entering their final approach to the airport runways.

Previously, pilots making instrument approaches to these two runways would stay north and east of Foster City, but pilots flying "on visual" could fly where they deemed suitable.

Post Office Has New Schedule

Following lengthy surveys, conducted over a three month period, Vista Grande Station, 6025 Mission Street, and Colma Station, 7373 Mission Street, Daly City, will operate on a Monday through Friday schedule and will close on Saturday and Sunday, beginning Saturday, September 4, 1971, Postmaster Vincent P. Murphy of Daly City announced today.

The Main Post Office, at 1100 Sullivan Street and Westlake Station, 199 Southgate Avenue, will continue to provide service for Daly City postal customers, on Saturdays from 8 a.m. to noon.

Pacifican Is Beaten

A Pacifica man was in the intensive care ward of Mary's Help Hospital today, the apparent victim of a brutal beating.

A passing motorist spotted Edward de Campos, 41, of 1376 Adobe Drive, collapsed on the side of the Coast Highway near Crespi Drive about 3:30 a.m. this morning.

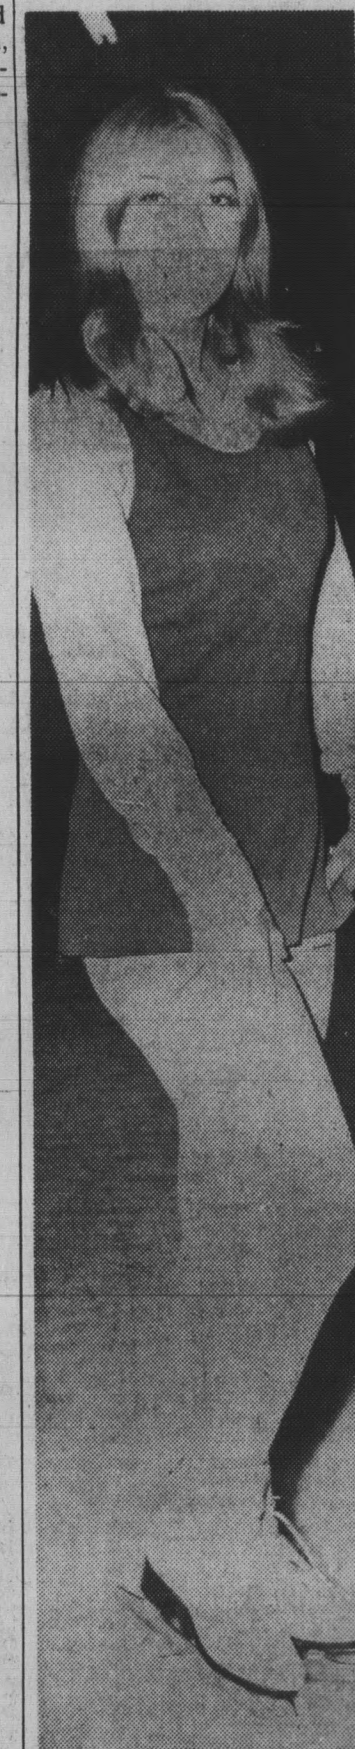

Officer Bill Tafuya said De Campos had apparently been assaulted on the beach and staggered the short distance to the roadway after the attack.

According to police, De Campos had been drinking in San Francisco and met some people who offered to drive him home.

They apparently took him to the beach area where they beat and robbed him of $100, police said.

Tafuya said the case is still under investigation, "but it appears more than one person is involved."

A Mary's Help Hospital spokesman said De Campos, father of two small children, was in satisfactory condition. He suffered severe cuts and bruises about the head and face.

IRENE LIVELY, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Clifford Lively of South San Francisco, has joined Shipstads & Johnson Ice Follies. Irene, a graduate of El Camino High School, has been studying skating for the past six years. She has studied with both Norman Kermont and Oscar Dussault and skated regularly at Burlingame Ice Arena. Ice Follies is presently playing eight shows a week at Winterland in San Francisco, Wednesday through Sunday.
